Siddaramaiah set to become Karnataka's longest-serving Chief Minister

CM credited public support for his political success, noting unexpected victories and a remarkable electoral journey

CM to discuss cabinet reshuffle with Cong leaders

Chief Minister Siddaramaiah announced that the state budget preparation will begin after Sankranti and that any decision regarding a cabinet reshuffle will be discussed with senior Congress leaders, including Rahul Gandhi, if they provide time for the meeting. He made these remarks while speaking to the media at Mysuru airport.

MYSURU

Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, becomes the long-standing record of former CM, the late D. Devaraj Urs, said that this achievement has been made possible by the blessings and support of the people. Speaking to the media at Mysuru airport, he said that with the blessings of the people, he would, on Jan 6 (today), equal the record of late Devaraj Urs in terms of the length of service as Chief Minister of the state. He also reflected on his political journey, noting that he never expected to become a minister, let alone a Chief Minister, after starting av s a taluk board member.

₹5 lakh compensation for helium cylinder blast victims

Following the helium gas cylinder explosion near Mysuru Palace on December 25, which killed three people and injured three others, Chief Minister Siddaramaiah announced ₹5 lakh compensation for each victim's family. The NIA is investigating the incident. Speaking to the media, the CM praised the police for their ongoing investigation and assured further decisions will follow the inquiry report.

Siddaramaiah highlighted that over the course of 13 elections, he has won more than eight times, emphasizing that records are created to be broken. While acknowledging Urs' popularity despite belonging to a small community, he said direct comparisons are difficult as the political landscape during Urs' tenure was very different. Urs had been elected unopposed once, which reflected the unique circumstances of that era.

The CM added that in the future, other leaders may surpass his record, present larger budgets, or achieve new milestones. He clarified that he has not yet made any decision regarding organizing a "Sadhana Samavesha" (achievement gathering) to mark his tenure. Siddaramaiah's remarks underscored that leadership achievements are built over time, supported by public faith, and that records are meant to inspire future leaders rather than define them.

Noting that political records are meant to be broken, he quipped: "Did Virat Kohli not break the records of Sachin Tendulkar?" The Chief Minister said he did not believe that such milestones would remain unmatched. "Other leaders may emerge, they may rule for a longer period than me," he added.

'Save Kogilu, Remove Illegal Immigrants,' BJP holds protest

BENGALURU

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) on Monday staged a protest in Kogilu against the Karnataka government's decision to provide houses to people who lost their dwellings during a recent eviction drive in the area.

The protest, held near the Country Club on Bagalur Main Road under the slogan "Save Kogilu, Remove Illegal Immigrants", was led by BJP state president B.Y. Vijayendra, Leader of the Opposition in the Legislative Assembly R. Ashoka, Leader of the Opposition in the Legislative Council Chalavadi Narayanaswamy, along with several party MLAs and MLCs.

Addressing reporters, Ashoka said the agitation was aimed at protecting Karnataka's land resources, which he asserted should be reserved exclusively for the people of the state. He alleged that the police prevented BJP workers from reaching the protest site, stopping them nearly three kilometres away, and termed the action unfair.

"Congress is betraying the state. Instead of helping our own poor and homeless citizens, the government is turning a blind eye to them while favouring illegal migrants from other states."

—R. Ashoka, BJP leader

Ashoka accused the Congress government, led by Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, of misusing land for political gains. "Karnataka has limited land, and it belongs to the people of the state, not to any individual leader," he said, adding that Congress leaders should offer their own land if they wished to support housing for the evicted families.

Vijayendra questioned the government's move to provide housing after initially demolishing allegedly illegal structures, calling it a reversal under political pressure. He also alleged that houses were being allotted to illegal migrants and claimed the decision had raised serious public concerns about governance in the state.

He further alleged misuse of public funds, pointing out that nearly 38 lakh poor people had applied for housing but received no allotments in the last two-and-a-half years. The BJP leaders said the party would approach the court if necessary.

Earlier, Urban Development Minister Byrathi Suresh said only 90 evicted families were eligible for compensatory housing, rejecting claims of a larger allotment.

SC denies bail to Umar Khalid, Sharjeel Imam in Delhi riots case

NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday refused to grant bail to Umar Khalid and Sharjeel Imam in the case linked to the 2020 Delhi riots, stating that the prosecution's material presents a prima facie case against them under provisions of the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA). The court observed that both played a significant and formative role in the alleged conspiracy, and therefore statutory restrictions on bail under Section 43D(5) applied.

However, the apex court ordered the release of five other accused — Gulfisha Fatima, Meera Haider, Shifa Ur Rehman, Mohammad Saleem Khan and Shadab Ahmed — after differentiating their alleged involvement. Their bail has been granted with 12 strict conditions.

A bench comprising Justices Aravind Kumar and NV Anjaria emphasized that bail decisions must assess the specific role attributed to each accused, the legitimacy of continued detention, and whether it undermines the prosecution's case. While acknowledging concerns related to personal liberty and prolonged incarceration, the court stressed that when prosecution material indicates a prima facie offence under UAPA, legislative restrictions prevail.

The court clarified that bail hearings are not meant to evaluate defences, but to determine whether the allegations reasonably connect the accused to the alleged conspiracy.

In a post on X, Umar's partner Banojyotsna Lahiri quoted him as saying "...this is life now," I am really happy for the others, who got bail! So relieved." ,When she informed him that she would come to meet him the next day in jail, Umar replied, "Good good, aa jana. Ab yahi zindagi hai'(Good, do come, this is life now)."

Opposition leaders question SC verdict

- Communist Party of India (Marxist) general secretary M A Baby raised questions regarding the apex court's observation that the activists' incarceration without trial for over five years has not crossed "constitutional impermissibility."
- CPI(M) Rajya Sabha MP John Brittas said the principle that "bail is the rule, jail the exception" clearly does not apply when it comes to certain individuals.
- Communist Party of India (CPI) general secretary D Raja said more than five years in jail without a trial is not justice, it is punishment without adjudication.
- Rashtriya Janata Dal (RJD) MP Manoj Jha said the denial of bail raises "troubling questions."

Trial in Renukaswamy murder case deferred to Jan 12

BENGALURU

The trial in the high-profile Renukaswamy murder case was adjourned to January 12 following a brief hearing before the trial court here on Monday. Two of the accused, actor Darshan and Pradosh, appeared before the court through video conferencing, wearing vibhuti on their foreheads.

The proceedings, which had commenced on December 17, could not move forward as the court is yet to rule on an application filed by the prosecution seeking to declare the victim's mother, Rathna Prabha, a hostile witness. The prosecution contended that Rathna Prabha had given statements in court that were inconsistent with her earlier testimony, thereby weakening the case. According to the prosecution, her deposition appeared to contradict crucial aspects of the charges framed against the accused. On these grounds, it sought the court's permission to treat her as a hostile witness, which would allow the prosecution to cross-examine her.

The court was expected to decide on the application on Monday. However, after hearing preliminary submissions, it chose to defer further proceedings for January 12.

The Department of Mines and Geology has intensified efforts to curb ongoing illegal mining and unregulated stone quarrying activities in Karkala taluk. Following complaints lodged with Lokayukta and the department itself, officials have personally conducted site inspections.Contractors disregarding safety regulations in mining areas have received final warning notices.

Mandatory directives require every stone quarry contractor to clearly demarcate leased boundaries with wire fencing.Boards displaying full lease details and hazard warning signs must be installed compulsorily.Post-lease expiry, pits created by extraction should be securely filled for safety.Contractors must submit reports, including photographs, confirming these measures within 10 days.Failure to respond or comply will trigger visits by technical teams for verification.

Locals demand proactive steps to prevent dangerous unfenced pits from turning fatal, especially in Karkala and Hebri regions with high quarrying density.Over 250 crusher and quarrying units operate in these two taluks alone—the highest in the district.

BJP Chief Blames Karnataka Govt for Yallapur Murder, Announces Party Aid

KARWAR

State BJP president B.Y. Vijayendra described the killing of a woman by her former classmate from another community in Yallapur as deeply unfortunate, attributing such repeated incidents to the failures of the Karnataka government and Home Department.

During a visit to the deceased Ranjita's residence on Sunday, he offered condolences to her family and handed over Rs. 5 lakh as relief from the party. Speaking to reporters afterward, he pointed out that similar events have persisted since Congress assumed power. He blamed appeasement politics, lack of fear toward police, and weak legal enforcement for the recurring tragedies.

Noting that Ranjita belonged to a backward and impoverished family, he urged the government to allocate two acres of land and Rs. 50 lakh as compensation to her Hindu household. He expressed curiosity about the administration's response in this case involving a Hindu family, adding that even ruling party MLAs harbor doubts about the state leadership, let alone the general public.

"I was grief-stricken as I visited her residence in Yellapur, paid my final respects, and witnessed the immeasurable pain and anguish endured by her bereaved family. May her soul rest in peace. I pray that her family gets enough strength and courage to endure this irreparable loss," Vijayendra stated.

"It is deeply disturbing that perpetrators today operate with absolute impunity, without the slightest fear of police action or legal consequences. I strongly urge the government to wake up from its slumber, take stringent and uncompromising measures, restore the rule of law, and ensure the safety and dignity of women, so they can live without fear in their own land," he added.

Condemnation of Ranjita's murder prompted a successful bandh in Yallapur, Uttara Kannada district, called by various pro-Hindu and Dalit organizations.Shops and businesses remained shut from morning, with auto-rickshaws halting services. While state transport buses operated normally, the prior evening's call for shutdown deterred rural visitors from entering the town. Sparse crowds and vehicles left streets deserted.

Sunday being market day, the usual fair did not occur. Some vegetable vendors who arrived turned back, while others traded later in the evening.Amid the bandh and protests, tight security arrangements were in place. Multiple groups staged demonstrations and submitted memoranda to the police superintendent and Sirsi-sub-divisional officer.

Responding to questions about the Valmiki statue incident in Ballari, Khader said those responsible for hate speech must be held accountable. "Even if there are legal shortcomings, they can be corrected. Opposing for no reason is not right," he said.

When asked about ambitions for the Chief Minister's post, Khader smiled and said, "There's no urgency. Let me first win four more terms in my constituency; we can think about higher office later."

Beary Sahitya Samiti Unveils Roadmap to Preserve Language and Heritage

MANGALURU

Reinforcing its commitment to the preservation of Beary language and culture, the Mangaluru Taluk Beary Sahitya Samiti has unveiled a comprehensive roadmap that includes cultural infrastructure, academic recognition and media outreach.

At the heart of the plan is the proposed construction of a "Beary Bhavan" at Manjanadi village in Udupi taluk, envisioned as a centre for literary, cultural and community activities. The Samiti has also sought government recommendation for establishing a Beary Studies Chair at Mangalore University.

Calling for parity with other regional languages, the Samiti has urged the State Government to include Beary in school textbooks alongside Tulu and Konkani. It has also demanded regular Beary-language programmes on All India Radio and Doordarshan, Mangaluru, to reach wider audiences.

Special focus has been placed on youth and academia, with proposals to encourage university-level research on Beary language, history, folklore, art and music. A scholarship scheme for students studying Beary has also been proposed, which the Samiti believes will help ensure the language's survival and growth.

Earlier president of the lit fest Abdul Rahiman Kuthethuru called for renewed community-led efforts to safeguard the Beary language, He said intergenerational transmission within families would be critical to its continuity in a rapidly changing social environment.

The event, he said, marked an important juncture for the Beary community to reassess its linguistic heritage and chart a clear path for the future.

Rahiman noted that Beary, spoken across coastal Karnataka and by sections of the diaspora, reflects centuries of cultural evolution. While the language has interacted closely with neighbouring tongues over time, scholars have consistently pointed to its distinct grammatical and linguistic features, reinforcing its status as an independent language with a strong identity.

In addition, awareness programmes aimed at students and the general public are planned to promote appreciation of Beary language, literature and arts across the region.

Sewage Water from Kodialguttu Wet Well Overflows; MLC Ivan D'Souza Inspects Site

MANGALURU

Sewage water overflowing from the Kodialguttu wet well into stormwater drains in the Kodialbail ward of Mangaluru City Corporation limits has caused serious inconvenience to residents, raising concerns over public health and environmental safety.

Following repeated complaints from local residents about foul smell, contamination of drinking water sources, and the risk of disease, Legislative Council member Ivan D'Souza visited the affected area on Sunday to inspect the situation firsthand. During the visit, he held detailed discussions with officials from the Mangaluru City Corporation, the sewage and engineering departments, and other concerned authorities.

Residents informed the MLC that sewage water was entering open drains and nearby wells, making the water unfit for consumption and creating unhygienic conditions in the locality. They alleged that despite several complaints to civic authorities, the problem had remained unresolved for a long time.

Officials explained that the sewage from the Kodialguttu wet well is supposed to be transported through underground pipelines to the Kudroli wet well, but due to aging, damaged, and inadequate pipelines, sewage has been overflowing into stormwater drains, especially during peak flow and rainy conditions.

Taking serious note of the issue, Ivan D'Souza directed officials to take immediate temporary measures to prevent sewage from entering public drains and ensure that wastewater is properly diverted. He stressed that residents' health should not be compromised due to administrative delays or technical lapses.

Officials informed the MLC that a ₹5 crore proposal has been prepared for laying three new sewage pipeline lines to permanently resolve the problem. The proposal has been submitted for approval, and the work is expected to begin once administrative clearance is received.

Ivan D'Souza instructed the officials to expedite the approval process and complete the work at the earliest. He also warned that strict action would be taken if negligence or delay continued and assured residents that the issue would be closely monitored until a permanent solution is implemented.

Several local residents, civic officials, and engineers were present during the inspection.

Elderly Couple's Protest in Puttur Continues for Sixth Day Over Alleged Illegal Demolition

PUTTUR

An elderly couple in Puttur town of Dakshina Kannada district continued their protest for the sixth consecutive day on Sunday, demanding action against the Kadaba Tahsildar over the alleged illegal demolition of their house.

The couple has alleged that their residential house was demolished by revenue officials without issuing prior notice or following due legal procedure, leaving them homeless. They have been staging a continuous sit-in protest outside a government office, seeking justice and accountability from the district administration.

According to the protesters, repeated appeals to authorities have failed to yield any concrete response so far. They have demanded immediate disciplinary action against the concerned official and compensation for the loss suffered.

In response to the protest, Puttur Assistant Commissioner Stella Vergis visited the protest site and held discussions with the couple. She reportedly assured them that the matter would be examined and appropriate steps would be taken after reviewing the records.

Despite the assurance, the couple said they would continue their protest until firm action is initiated. The incident has drawn attention from local residents and activists, raising questions about adherence to due process in administrative actions.

Strict Adherence to Traffic Rules Can Save Lives, Says Senior Civil Judge Jaibunisa

MANGALURU

Strict compliance with traffic rules is essential to prevent road accidents, said Senior Civil Judge and Member-Secretary of the District Legal Services Authority (DLSA), Jaibunisa, on Monday. She stressed the need to raise public awareness about road safety and urged everyone to cooperate in following traffic regulations to reduce accidents.

Speaking at the 37th National Road Safety Month event, held at the Mangaluru Regional Transport Office auditorium in collaboration with the District Administration, DLSA, Transport Department, and Police Department, Jaibunisa highlighted the rising number of road accident fatalities across the state in recent days. "Following traffic rules is the only way to protect lives. Vehicle operators must always remember the safety and well-being of their families who trust them," she said.

She further emphasized the importance of providing comprehensive road safety information to the public, noting that youth often lack legal awareness and that school and college students should be educated on traffic rules. Stone-Pelting at Om Shakti Devotees: All Accused Arrested

Incidents threatening communal harmony recur in city despite heightened vigilance

BENGALURU

Karnataka Home Minister Dr G. Parameshwara on Monday said that all those involved in the stone-pelting incident targeting Om Shakti devotees in JJR Nagar have been arrested and assured strict action in accordance with the law. He stated that four to five boys, aged between 15 and 17 years, were responsible for the incident and that the case falls under juvenile delinquency.

Speaking to media persons, the Home Minister said the incident occurred on Sunday night near the Om Shakti temple in VS Garden, JJR Nagar, when miscreants allegedly pelted stones at devotees and the chariot while a religious procession was underway. "Four or five young boys indulged in stone pelting. All of them have already been arrested, and the police will proceed further as per legal provisions," he said.

According to police sources, stones were thrown at the chariot and the Om Shakti Maladharis during the procession, injuring a child, a young woman and an elderly woman. A child wearing an Om Shakti garland was also reportedly targeted. The accused fled the spot immediately after the attack but were later traced and taken into custody.

Following the incident, members of the Om Shakti Maladhari community gathered in front of the JJR Nagar police station and staged a protest, demanding immediate arrests and stringent action against those responsible. Protesters alleged that the stone pelting was carried out by individuals from another community and claimed it was an attempt to disrupt religious observances.

Dr Parameshwara appealed for calm and reiterated the government's commitment to maintaining communal harmony. "Anyone who disturbs religious practices or attempts to disrupt communal harmony will be dealt with strictly as per law," he said.

Emphasising democratic values, the Home Minister added that all religions are given equal freedom to observe their respective festivals and traditions, and any attempt to violate this principle would not be tolerated.

Warm Nights Surprise B'luru, IMD Says Winter Chill Will Return Soon

BENGALURU

Bengaluru experienced an unusual spell of warm nights over the weekend, with minimum temperatures rising sharply to 17.4°C, sparking concerns among residents that summer might be setting in earlier than usual. Just a few days ago, night temperatures in the city had dipped to around 12°C, typical of peak winter conditions.

However, scientists from the India Meteorological Department (IMD) have reassured citizens that the sudden rise is temporary and does not mark the end of winter. According to IMD officials, colder conditions are expected to return within the next two to three weeks, including in Bengaluru and other parts of south interior Karnataka.

The brief warming has been attributed mainly to easterly winds blowing in from the Bay of Bengal. These winds have carried additional moisture into the region, leading to increased cloud cover over Bengaluru. The cloudy skies acted as a blanket overnight, reducing the loss of heat from the earth's surface and resulting in higher minimum temperatures.

Meteorologists noted that several weather systems are currently influencing the region. An upper-air cyclonic circulation over the Bay of Bengal, a trough extending up to the Tamil Nadu coast, and another system affecting coastal Karnataka have together contributed to overcast conditions, warmer nights, and largely dry weather across Bengaluru and neighbouring districts.

While the city recorded milder night temperatures, the situation was different in other parts of the state. Central and north interior Karnataka continued to experience sharp cold conditions, with dense fog reported during late night and early morning hours. In contrast, districts such as Mysuru, Mandya and Chamarajanagar received isolated rainfall over the past couple of days.

IMD officials reiterated that winter conditions are expected to persist until the end of January. Minimum temperatures in Bengaluru are likely to dip again after January 5 or 6, with cold-wave conditions first affecting north interior Karnataka before gradually spreading southward. The chill is expected to ease only from the first week of February, they said.

5 Sub-Registrars Suspended Over Illegal Property Registrations

BENGALURU

The State government has uncovered a major property registration scam linked to the e-khata system, leading to the suspension of five sub-registrars after officials detected the fraudulent registration of around 1,332 properties over a one-year period. The irregularities reportedly occurred between December 6, 2024, and December 5, 2025.

According to officials, the Department of Stamps and Registrations suspended the officers for their alleged role in misusing the Kaveri 2.0 portal, failing to import mandatory e-khata details from the e-Swathu software, and facilitating illegal registration of sale deeds. The suspended officials have been identified as Ravi Sankana Gouda, N. Satish Kumar, Sridhar (First Division Assistant and incharge Sub-Registrar), Girish Chandra and R. Prabhavathi. The e-khata system was introduced with much fanfare as a digital safeguard to curb property fraud by ensuring that registrations could not proceed without valid ownership records. However, the scam came to light following a complaint by the executive director of the Centre for Smart Governance (CSG), the agency that provides technology solutions to government departments.

Kogilu Demolition: House Built Illegally: Krishna Byre Gowda

BENGALURU

After Krishna Byre Gowda returned from abroad around 3 am on Monday, Housing Minister Zameer Ahmed Khan's personal secretary, Sarfaraz Khan, visited the minister's residence to discuss the issue of housing allocation for the affected residents.

Revenue Minister Krishna Byre Gowda on Monday acknowledged that houses demolished in Kogilu Layout were constructed illegally, clarifying that the encroached land belongs to the Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) and not the Revenue Department. He said the government's action was in line with its policy of regularly clearing encroachments on public land.

Addressing a press conference at his residence after returning to Bengaluru from an overseas trip, the minister said encroachment clearance is a continuous administrative process. "Whether it is BBMP land or Revenue Department land, encroachments are being cleared on a regular basis. In the Revenue Department, such clearances are carried out every Saturday. Even if it is government land, title deeds cannot be issued for BBMP land," he explained.

Krishna Byre Gowda said the Kogilu case was not an isolated one and that the government routinely clears encroachments to secure public land. At the same time, he noted that several poor and deserving families had been living on the cleared land for many years. "Keeping humanitarian considerations in mind, the Chief Minister has decided to provide housing to the poor who were residing there for a long time," he said.

The minister cautioned against making allegations without evidence, particularly claims that illegal Bangladeshi migrants were living in the area. "We should not make statements based on speculation. Let the police investigate whether people from outside the state are involved," he said, adding that anyone found to be involved in illegal activities should face legal action, irrespective of political affiliation. "If BJP workers are involved, action should be taken against them as well," he added.

Krishna Byre Gowda also pointed out that illegal constructions often take place due to negligence by local bodies and the support extended by certain politicians. He stressed the need for accountability at all levels to prevent such situations from recurring.

He said the process of allotting alternative housing to eligible residents of Kogilu Layout was delayed as he was abroad. "The role of local MLAs is crucial in plot allocation and decision-making. The government was awaiting my inputs before proceeding," he said.

Orange Line Metro Work Yet to Begin a Yr after Approval

BENGALURU

More than a year after the Central government gave the green signal to Bengaluru's much-awaited Orange Line Metro project, construction work is yet to begin, raising serious concerns over mounting financial losses. Prime Minister Narendra Modi had laid the foundation stone for the project, creating high expectations of early execution. However, Bengaluru Metro Rail Corporation Limited (BMRCL) is yet to invite tenders for the civil works.

As of now, one year and 123 days have passed since the project received approval, but ground-level progress remains negligible. Sources said the continued delay is proving expensive, with BMRCL reportedly facing an additional financial burden of nearly ₹2 crore for every day the project is stalled. At this rate, a delay of 487 days could translate into an extra cost of around ₹974 crore.

The Central government had accorded approval for Phase III of the Orange Line on August 16, 2024. Despite this, tenders for civil construction have not yet been floated. Officials attribute the delay to the State government's decision to develop the entire corridor as a double-decker structure, combining metro and road infrastructure. While the move is aimed at easing traffic congestion, it has significantly escalated project costs.

The double-decker decision is expected to require an additional ₹9,000 crore, pushing the financial burden higher and complicating the tendering process. Sources indicated that prolonged delays could further inflate tender costs by thousands of crores due to rising material prices and interest components. The original Orange Line project was estimated to cost ₹15,611 crore, but the delay alone could add at least ₹500 crore more to the overall expenditure.

'Brahmins Are Self-Sacrificing, Need Greater Unity'

BENGALURU

Karnataka Administrative Reforms Commission Chairman RV Deshpande on Sunday said that Brahmins are widely recognised as a self-sacrificing community because of their strong spirit of service, but stressed the need for greater unity and better organisation within the community.

He was speaking after inaugurating the Viprotsava–2026 and Bhargava Bhushan Award ceremony organised by the Akhil Bharatiya Brahmin Mahasangh at Gayana Samaja. Deshpande said unity is the foundation of strength in any organisation and the same principle applies to the Brahmin community.

"For the development of society as a whole, internal differences must be set aside and people should come together in an organised manner," he said, adding that collective effort was essential for progress. Emphasising the importance of education, Deshpande urged the community to ensure quality education for its children despite challenges. He also advised parents to focus on skill development and employability, rather than allowing youth to remain idle at home.

Mahasangh office bearers, community leaders and several members of the Brahmin community were present at the programme.

Eye Infection Spreads in City, Triggers Health Scare

BENGALURU

Bengaluru is witnessing a rapid rise in cases of "Madras Eye," also known as Pink Eye or conjunctivitis, with doctors attributing the surge to recent cold weather conditions and increased humidity in the atmosphere. Health experts say changing climatic patterns are creating favourable conditions for viral infections, which are now directly affecting the eyes, particularly among school-going children.

Doctors explained that Madras Eye is a highly contagious viral infection that spreads easily through contact. Common symptoms include redness of the eyes, severe irritation or burning sensation, excessive watering, sensitivity to light and blurred vision. Infected individuals may also experience discomfort while reading or focusing on bright objects.

Medical professionals have strongly advised the public not to ignore symptoms or resort to self-medication and home remedies.

LANGUAGE CONTROVERSY ERUPTS

Kannada Row: Hostel Warden Held After Warning Student

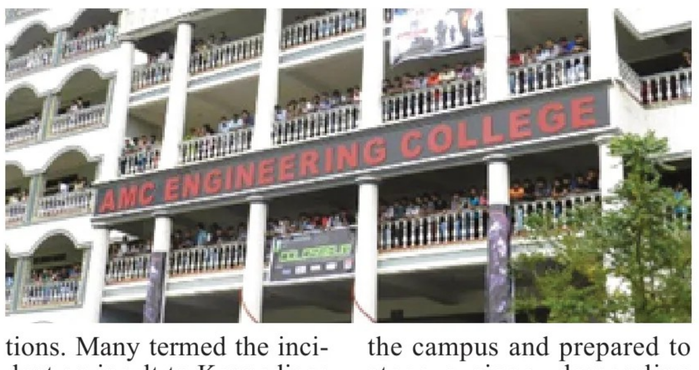
A language row erupted in Bengaluru after a private college hostel allegedly warned students against speaking Kannada, triggering widespread outrage, protests and swift police action. The incident, reported from a women's hostel linked to AMC College on Bannerghatta Road, came to light after a video of students confronting the hostel warden went viral on social media.

According to students, the hostel warden allegedly instructed them not to speak Kannada within the hostel premises and told them to "speak at home" if they wished to converse in the language. The students claimed they were instead asked to communicate only in Hindi, which they described as disrespectful to Kannada and the local culture. The alleged remarks shocked several women students and immediately led to protests inside the hostel.

Visuals showed students surrounding the warden and questioning her instructions, demanding an explanation. The confrontation quickly escalated into a larger issue as the video spread online, drawing sharp reactions from the public and Kannada organisations. Many termed the incident an insult to Kannadigas and an attack on linguistic identity in the state capital.



Kannada groups condemned the alleged warning and announced protests against the college management. Activists gathered near the campus and prepared to stage a siege, demanding strict action against those responsible. They insisted that Bengaluru, being the capital of Karnataka, must respect Kannada and its speakers.

Following complaints from students, Bannerghatta police registered a case and arrested the hostel warden. Police officials said an investigation is underway to ascertain the exact sequence of events and whether any additional violations occurred. The arrest helped defuse tensions, though protests continued demanding accountability.

Under mounting pressure, the AMC College management suspended the hostel warden, stating that her conduct, if proven, was unacceptable and contrary to the institution's values. However, Kannada organisations said suspension alone was insufficient and called for firm measures to prevent similar incidents in the future.

MLA Balakrishna apologises for remark against Magadi tahsildar

MLA H.C. Balakrishna apologises to Magadi Tahsildar Sharath Kumar for controversial "slippers" remark during public grievance meeting

RAMANAGARA

MLA H.C. Balakrishna, who recently sparked controversy by stating that he would have the Magadi Tahsildar beaten with slippers by the public if he failed to perform his duties, has now apologised to Tahsildar Sharath Kumar. The MLA had earlier reprimanded the official during a public grievance meeting, warning him in harsh language, which invited widespread criticism.

Participating in a taluk-level government employees' sports meet on Sunday, where the Tahsildar was also present, Balakrishna clarified that his remarks were made in colloquial "village language" without the intention to hurt anyone. He said he had brought the officer to the taluk to serve the people without expecting any personal favour, but expressed frustration when farmers' grievances remained unresolved. "If my words have hurt you, I apologise. My only concern is justice for the people. When people are unhappy, they blame me, not the officers," he said.

The MLA further questioned corruption in administration, asking how farmers could be expected to pay bribes with their hard-earned money. Recalling the respect late IAS officer D.K. Ravi commanded, he lamented that honest officers have become rare today. He stressed that he never demands money from anyone and his only aim is to ensure justice for his constituency.

Balakrishna reiterated that he did not intend to insult officials but spoke out of pain and concern for the public. "If officers work sincerely, I will respect them immensely," he added, emphasising that his remarks were situational rather than personal.

11 monkeys found dead in forest, poisoning suspected

Eleven monkeys were found dead in Devarayanadurga forest over two days; authorities suspect poisoning and are conducting post-mortem investigations

TUMAKURU

A mysterious incident in the Devarayanadurga forest area has left 11 monkeys dead over the past two days, raising concerns among wildlife officials. The carcasses were discovered scattered across the forested region between Devarayanadurga and Durga village. On the first day, seven dead monkeys were found, followed by four more the next day. are prioritising a thorough inquiry to determine the exact cause of death.

Currently, post-mortem examinations of the deceased monkeys are being carried out at the Urdigere Animal Hospital. The incident has also raised awareness about the safety and conservation of wildlife in the region.

Authorities have confirmed that further steps will be taken based on the post-mortem findings, and necessary measures will be implemented if poisoning is confirmed. Meanwhile, local villagers and environmental groups are cooperating with officials to ensure that similar cases do not occur in the future.

Yogi Adityanath Meets PM Modi Amid Speculation

Speculation over Uttar Pradesh cabinet expansion intensified as CM Yogi Adityanath met PM Narendra Modi today.

NEW DELHI

Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath met Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Monday, fuelling renewed speculation about a long-pending expansion of the state cabinet. The meeting comes amid growing political activity within the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) following recent organisational changes at the national and state levels. Newly appointed acting BJP national president Nithin Navin was also accompanying the chief minister.

According to party sources, discussions during the meeting focused on Uttar Pradesh's development roadmap as well as the organisational structure of the state government. Particular emphasis was reportedly placed on ensuring social and regional balance in the proposed cabinet reshuffle, a factor seen as crucial ahead of future electoral challenges.

Yogi Adityanath's cabinet had earlier comprised 54 ministers, leaving six positions vacant. These vacancies have remained unfilled for several months, adding to speculation about an imminent expansion. Party insiders suggest that after the appointment of Pankaj Chaudhary as state party president, several changes are likely to be introduced within the BJP's organisational framework. As part of this process, some ministers may be elevated in status by being given independent charge of key departments.

Sources also indicate that the state's representation in the cabinet is expected to increase when the expansion takes place, which is being discussed for February. Several leaders have been named as potential inductees, including former state BJP president Bhupendra Singh Chaudhary, MLC Mahendra Singh, Rampur MLA Akash Saxena, and Mant MLA Rajesh Chaudhary. There is also speculation that Akash Saxena could replace Forest and Environment Minister Arun Saxena, while some existing ministers may be dropped from the Yogi cabinet altogether.

The leadership change and cabinet expansion had reportedly been pending for nearly 11 months, leading to sustained political anticipation. Analysts believe the party is now fully prepared to move ahead, with Monday's meeting expected to accelerate final preparations.

Armed Forces Made India Proud During Operation Sindoor: VP

NEW DELHI

Vice President C P Radhakrishnan praised Operation Sindoor, saying India's armed forces showcased national resolve and global strength.

Vice President C P Radhakrishnan on Monday said India's armed forces made the nation proud through the successful execution of Operation Sindoor, demonstrating the country's determination and military capability to the world. Addressing cadets at the National Cadet Corps (NCC) Republic Day Camp held at Delhi Cantonment, he lauded both the armed forces and the NCC for their exemplary contributions during the operation.

In his address, the Vice President said Operation Sindoor stood as a strong message of India's resoluteness in safeguarding national interests. He noted that the precision and professionalism displayed by the armed forces during the military action earned global recognition and reinforced India's stature as a confident and capable nation. According to him, such operations not only protect national security but also strengthen citizens' faith in the country's defence institutions.

Highlighting the role of the NCC, Radhakrishnan said the organisation played a crucial supporting role during Operation Sindoor. The NCC made a commendable contribution during Operation Sindoor when nearly 72,000 NCC cadets turned into 'NCC warriors' by volunteering services for civil defence measures, he said. He added that the scale of participation reflected the spirit of discipline, patriotism, and service that the NCC seeks to instil among young Indians.

The Vice President emphasised that NCC cadets assisted authorities in a range of civil defence activities, including disaster preparedness, public awareness, and logistical support. Their involvement, he said, demonstrated how youth organisations can effectively complement national efforts during critical times. He described the cadets' contribution as an example of nation-first thinking and collective responsibility.

Radhakrishnan also spoke about the broader role of the NCC in shaping future leaders. He said the organisation continues to play a vital role in nurturing character, leadership, and a sense of duty among the youth. By actively participating in national initiatives such as Operation Sindoor, NCC cadets gain real-world experience that goes beyond classroom learning and training drills.

Suvendu Adhikari writes to CEC

KOLKATA

A day after West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee raised concerns over the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls in West Bengal, Leader of Opposition Suvendu Adhikari on Monday wrote to Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) Gyanesh Kumar, strongly refuting the allegations made by the Trinamool Congress (TMC) supremo. Using his social media handle, Adhikari shared a copy of his letter to CEC and slammed Mamata Banerjee for her desperate lies against the SIR exercise.

I have sent a letter to the Hon'ble Chief Election Commissioner, @ECISVEEP Shri Gyanesh Kumar, dismantling Mamata Banerjee's desperate lies against the SIR exercise and her latest plea for halting SIR. Her so-called concerns about the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) are nothing but Pure Fiction, said Adkhikari.

Adhikari alleged that the TMC was rattled by the SIR exercise as it would expose the use of fake and illegal voters in elections.

14 Voters Found Holding Indian EPIC Cards and Bangladeshi Passports

KOLKATA

Amid the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls in West Bengal, the office of the Chief Electoral Officer (CEO) has detected serious irregularities involving 14 individuals found to be holding Indian Electors Photo Identity Cards (EPIC) while simultaneously possessing valid Bangladeshi passports. The development has raised concerns over the integrity of the voter database in a state that shares a long and sensitive international border with Bangladesh.

According to officials, the CEO's office received inputs suggesting that these 14 voters might originally be residents of Bangladesh. Acting on these suspicions, the CEO sought verification from the Foreigners' Regional Registration Office (FRRO), Kolkata. In its response, the FRRO confirmed that all 14 individuals were indeed Bangladeshi passport holders.

The FRRO further revealed that these individuals had entered India legally with valid visas but failed to return to Bangladesh even after their visa periods expired. During their extended stay in West Bengal, they allegedly managed to obtain multiple Indian identity documents, including EPIC cards, which are issued exclusively to Indian citizens eligible to vote.

Based on the confirmation received, the CEO's office has already recommended to the Election Commission of India (ECI) that the names of these 14 individuals be deleted from the final electoral rolls. An official from the CEO's office said the deletions will be reflected in the final voters' list scheduled to be published on February 14.

Officials clarified that while the Election Commission's role is limited to ensuring the accuracy of electoral rolls, further legal action against the individuals concerned will be initiated by appropriate law enforcement agencies as per existing legal provisions. This may include proceedings under immigration, citizenship, and foreigner-related laws.

With BMC elections nearing, Mumbai's political battle intensifies as Thackerays unite and BJP sharpens corruption allegations.

Mumbai Civic Polls Heat Up as Thackeray Cousins Unite

MUMBAI

As the Brihanmumbai Municipal Corporation (BMC) elections scheduled for January 15 draw closer, the political contest for control of Mumbai has entered a decisive and sharply polarised phase. In a rare display of unity, the Thackeray cousins Uddhav Thackeray and Raj Thackeray released a joint Vachan Nama (manifesto), signalling coordinated opposition to the ruling Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) in the country's richest civic body.

For the first time in nearly two decades, Shiv Sena (UBT), the Maharashtra Navnirman Sena (MNS), and the Sharad Pawar-led Nationalist Congress Party faction have presented a unified vision for Mumbai under the slogan Shabd Thackerencha (word of the Thackerays). The alliance has framed the civic election as a fight to Save Democracy, alleging vote theft through unopposed victories and appealing particularly to young voters' sense of idealism and civic pride.

Their manifesto outlines an expansive welfare agenda, including the Swabhiman Nidhi—a monthly allowance of Rs 1,500 for domestic workers and Koli women—the construction of one lakh affordable homes over five years, and the creation of a dedicated BMC Housing Authority. Other promises include 100 units of free electricity for residential users through BEST, subsidised meals at Rs 10 for breakfast and lunch, reduction of the minimum bus fare to Rs 5, employment allowances and interest-free loans for gig workers, and the establishment of five new medical colleges. The Vachan Nama also makes strong identity-based assertions, calling for a Marathi Mayor and insisting that Mumbai's land should primarily be reserved for Mumbaikars.

The BJP, however, has gone on the offensive. In response to the joint manifesto, the party released an Aarop Patra (charge sheet), accusing the Thackeray-led administration of large-scale corruption during its 25-year control of the BMC. The BJP alleged a scam amounting to Rs 3 lakh crore, claiming that despite spending Rs 21,000 crore on road construction over the past decade, Mumbai continues to grapple with chronic pothole problems.

Madras HC to deliver its verdict on Thiruparankundram Hill lamp case

CHENNAI

The Madras High Court is set to deliver its verdict on Tuesday in the contentious Thiruparankundram Hill lamp case after reserving orders on a batch of appeals challenging a single judge's directive permitting the lighting of a ceremonial lamp atop the hill.

The matter was heard by a Division Bench comprising Justices G. Jayachandran and K.K. Ramakrishnan, which considered detailed oral submissions from all parties. The appeals were filed by several stakeholders, including the Charitable Trust Department and the Dargah administration, against an earlier order passed by Justice G.R. Swaminathan.

The core issue before the court relates to whether a lamp can be lit on the summit of the Thiruparankundram Hill and whether such an act amounts merely to a religious practice or extends to the assertion of property rights over the land.

Appearing for the Tamil Nadu government, Chief Advocate P.S. Raman argued that the petitioner, Ram Ravikumar, had not produced any credible documentary or historical evidence to establish the existence of a lamp post or pillar on the hilltop.

The state, he said, has consistently maintained that no such lamp pillar exists at the site.

Raman referred to historical records to bolster the government's case, pointing out that when a judge inspected the hill in 1920, the judgment made no mention of any lamp pillar. Had such a structure existed, he argued, it would have found a place in the inspection report and the subsequent ruling.

He further submitted that the administration of temples and the conduct of religious rituals are governed by statutory rules and long-established practices. Temple authorities, he said, have the exclusive right to conduct customary ceremonies strictly in accordance with law.

The Chief Advocate also contended that the dispute ought to have been taken to a civil court, as it involves questions of rights, usage, and long-standing practices.

India advises nationals in Iran to remain cautious as protests intensify

NEW DELHI

New Delhi on Monday urged Indian nationals in Iran to exercise heightened caution amid a growing wave of protests sparked by the country's worsening economic conditions. The Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) issued an advisory asking Indians to avoid non-essential travel to Iran until further notice.

"In view of recent developments, Indian nationals are advised to avoid non-essential travel to the Islamic Republic of Iran," the MEA said. It also called on Indian citizens and Persons of Indian Origin (PIOs) currently residing in Iran to remain vigilant, stay away from areas witnessing protests or demonstrations, and closely follow updates issued by the Embassy of India in Tehran through its website and official social media channels.

The MEA further advised Indian nationals living in Iran on resident visas to register with the Indian Embassy if they have not already done so, to ensure better communication and assistance if required. MEA spokesperson Randhir Jaiswal reiterated the government's concern for the safety and well-being of Indians in the region.

The advisory comes as protests in Iran entered their ninth consecutive day, with demonstrations reported across several provinces, including Tehran. Videos circulating on social media showed large crowds assembling not only in the capital but also in provinces such as Fars, Ilam, North Khorasan, and Semnan.

Human rights groups have reported that protests have taken place in 26 of Iran's 31 provinces since last week. Activists claim that at least 19 protesters and one member of the security forces have been killed during the unrest, although Iranian authorities have not released official casualty figures.

The developments have attracted international attention. US President Donald Trump warned of possible American action if Iranian authorities escalate their response. "If they start killing people like they have in the past, they're going to get hit very hard by the United States," he said.

Meanwhile, Iran's parliamentary Speaker Mohammad Baqer Qalibaf acknowledged public anger, calling for legitimate demands to be addressed, while warning that any foreign interference would be dealt with firmly—an approach echoed by Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei.

He was rushed to the hospital but succumbed to his injuries during treatment. Police officials said the matter is under investigation.

Panic in Andhra Pradesh Villages After Gas Leak and Fire at ONGC Well

A massive gas leak at an ONGC well triggered fire, panic and large-scale evacuations in Andhra Pradesh villages.

AMARAVATI

Panic gripped parts of Andhra Pradesh's Ambedkar Konaseema district on Monday after a massive gas leak from a well operated by Oil and Natural Gas Corporation (ONGC) triggered huge flames and explosions, forcing authorities to evacuate residents from nearby villages as a precautionary measure.

The incident occurred at Irusumanda village in Malikipuram Mandal, where repair works were underway at the ONGC well using a workover rig after production had been temporarily halted. According to local officials, crude oil–mixed gas suddenly erupted during the repair process, resulting in a powerful blowout. The gas shot high into the air with tremendous force, creating a dangerous situation within minutes.

Officials said the leaked gas soon caught fire, leading to massive flames at the site. Thick clouds of gas and smoke spread rapidly across Irusumanda and surrounding villages, resembling dense fog and severely reducing visibility. The intensity of the blaze and repeated loud explosions triggered widespread fear among residents.

As a safety measure, authorities began evacuating people living within a five-kilometre radius of the accident site. Massive flames spread quickly, engulfing nearby coconut plantations, with nearly 500 coconut trees reportedly reduced to ashes in the fire. The damage to agricultural property has added to the distress of local villagers, many of whom depend on coconut farming for their livelihood.

To prevent further ignition, officials issued urgent announcements through loudspeakers, instructing residents of at least three nearby villages to avoid using electricity, switching on electrical appliances, or lighting cooking stoves. Power usage was discouraged to minimise the risk of additional explosions caused by sparks.

An emergency response team from ONGC, along with senior company officials, rushed to the site soon after revenue authorities alerted them to the situation. Efforts were immediately launched to cap the gas leak and bring the blaze under control. Fire services personnel, police teams, and officials from multiple departments were deployed in large numbers to manage the emergency and assist with evacuations.

BJP Launches Nationwide 'VB–G RAM G Janjagaran Abhiyan

NEW DELHI

The BJP launched a nationwide rural awareness drive to highlight the VB–G RAM G Act's provisions.

The Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) on Monday launched a nationwide public awareness campaign titled 'VB–G RAM G Janjagaran Abhiyan' to promote and explain the provisions of the newly enacted VB–G RAM G Act, 2025. The extensive outreach initiative is aimed primarily at rural India and seeks to familiarise farmers, agricultural labourers, and village communities with what the party describes as a transformative rural employment and development reform.

The campaign will be carried out under the leadership of Prime Minister Narendra Modi, reflecting the BJP's effort to directly link the new scheme with the government's broader development vision. The directive to roll out the Janjagaran Abhiyan was issued by BJP National General Secretary Arun Singh through an official letter dated January 4, 2026.

According to the party, the primary objective of the campaign is to take the key benefits of the VB–G RAM G scheme directly to rural beneficiaries and ensure clarity about its scope and intent. The BJP has positioned the Act as a landmark reform aligned with the vision of Viksit Bharat, projecting it as a robust alternative to the existing rural employment framework under MGNREGA. Party leaders have argued that the new scheme is designed to accelerate rural development while addressing long-standing concerns related to inefficiency and corruption.

The VB–G RAM G scheme focuses on strengthening the rural economy, expanding employment opportunities, and improving infrastructure at the grassroots level. One of its major features is the enhancement of guaranteed employment from 100 days to 125 days, along with a stronger emphasis on sustainable livelihood generation and asset creation in villages. The BJP claims that this approach will not only provide more workdays but also ensure higher-quality outcomes for rural communities.

The Janjagaran Abhiyan has been structured to explain the scheme's benefits in simple and accessible terms, particularly by comparing it with MGNREGA. It also aims to counter what the BJP describes as misinformation being spread by Opposition parties, which portray the scheme as anti-farmer or anti-poor.

World's largest Shivling reaches Bihar's Gopalganj

PATNA

The Gopalganj district administration in Bihar is facing a major challenge in transporting the world's largest and heaviest Shivling due to the poor condition of a bridge over the Gandak (Narayani) River. The 210-tonne Shivling, loaded on a 106-wheel trailer weighing about 160 tonnes, has reached Gopalganj, but officials have halted further movement over safety concerns. District Magistrate Pawan Kumar Sinha said teams from Bihar Rajya Pul Nirman Nigam Limited and the National Highways Authority of India have been called to inspect the bridge after cracks were found at several locations. Bihar Rural Works Minister Ashok Choudhary is also scheduled to inspect the site.

The Shivling, built in Mahabalipuram, Tamil Nadu, travelled 3,178 km over 32 days and is destined for the Virat Ramayan Temple in Motihari. Officials said both alternative routes—via Dumariaghat and Bettiah—also have weak bridges and culverts, making transportation risky.

Congress leader Harshwardhan Sapkal accused the BJP-led Mahayuti government of systematically eroding democratic norms in local polls.

MPCC Chief Harshwardhan Sapkal Alleges Democracy Undermined

MUMBAI

Maharashtra Pradesh Congress Committee (MPCC) president Harshwardhan Sapkal on Monday launched a sharp attack on the BJP-led Mahayuti government, alleging that the basic principles of free and fair elections were being systematically dismantled during the ongoing local body polls across the state.

Addressing a press conference, Sapkal accused Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis, Deputy Chief Minister Eknath Shinde, and Deputy Chief Minister Ajit Pawar of bypassing democratic norms. He alleged that a market for horse-trading had opened even before polling day, reflecting what he described as the ruling alliance's desperation to retain power at any cost.

The BJP-Mahayuti's hunger for power has reached a point where it is swallowing democracy itself, Sapkal said. Referring to the municipal corporation elections, he remarked that the situation resembled a grim enactment of the saying, Baap Bada Na Bhaiya, Sabse Bada Rupaiya (Money is greater than any relationship). He claimed that monetary inducements and pressure tactics were being used to influence candidates and outcomes.

Sapkal stressed that elections are a routine and essential feature of a healthy democracy, but accused the present dispensation of attempting to eliminate the Opposition entirely from the political arena. Drawing a contrast with India's early democratic traditions, he recalled that the Cabinet of the country's first Prime Minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, included six non-Congress ministers, reflecting an inclusive and democratic mindset.

Today, the BJP and Mahayuti have developed a mindset where they want no opposition, Sapkal alleged. He claimed that to secure unopposed victories, ruling party leaders were preventing Opposition candidates from filing nominations, issuing threats, and exerting undue pressure. According to him, these actions were being carried out with the blatant support of the police and administration, while the Election Commission was acting as a mute spectator. The MPCC chief further demanded electoral reforms to protect voters' rights.

After LoP, Kerala anti-graft body seeks CBI probe

THIRUVANANTHAPURAM

After Kerala's Leader of the Opposition (LoP) V.D. Satheesan, the State Vigilance and Anti-Corruption Bureau (VACB) has on Monday recommended a Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) probe into the alleged financial irregularities linked to the Punarjani housing project, involving an NGO Manappatt Foundation, and its chief executive officer (CEO). The Punarjani project, spearheaded by LoP Satheesan during his tenure as an MLA, aimed to construct houses for those who lost their homes in the devastating 2018 floods.

Allegations surfaced that the NGO's CEO, Ameer Ahmed, in collusion with Satheesan, raised funds from foreign countries between 2018 and 2022 for flood rehabilitation, allegedly in violation of norms.

The VACB recommended a CBI probe against the Kerala LoP following a preliminary inquiry into the alleged misappropriation of foreign funds collected for post-flood reconstruction.

Adding to the Congress' troubles ahead of the state Assembly elections in a few months from now, the Vigilance Director Manoj Abraham has submitted a report to the state government seeking a federal investigation under the Foreign Contribution (Regulation) Act (FCRA), citing the international nature of the fund collection, according to local media reports quoting Home Department sources.

The probe revealed that substantial amounts were raised from expatriates in Middle Eastern countries without requisite clearances under the FCRA, a senior official said.

Major crackdown on drugs, illicit liquor in Coimbatore rural district

COIMBATORE

The Coimbatore rural district police recorded major success in curbing drug peddling and the illegal liquor trade in 2025, with officials attributing the improved enforcement largely to the implementation of the 'Smart Khakis' scheme, which ensured continuous patrolling and strengthened visible policing across rural areas. According to data compiled by the Coimbatore rural police, a total of 670 kg of narcotic substances were seized during the year in 464 drug peddling cases, leading to the arrest of 556 accused people.

Police officials described the figures as a significant achievement and one of the most sustained anti-narcotics drives carried out in the district in recent years.

District Superintendent of Police K Karthikeyan said several preventive and enforcement measures were introduced in 2025 to strengthen law and order in the district.

The past year saw the launch of the 'Smart Khakis' scheme, under which police personnel were deployed on a shift basis to patrol the entire Coimbatore rural district around the clock, he said.

Under the initiative, patrol teams were specifically tasked with visiting isolated villages, vulnerable stretches, and crime-prone hotspots in rural areas. This strategy, the SP noted, played a crucial role in preventing crimes and ensuring faster intervention.

The continuous presence of police personnel acted as a deterrent. Their regular visits to sensitive locations helped us identify suspicious activities early and prevent offences, he added.

Pointing out that seizures of narcotic substances increased by 52 per cent in 2025, Karthikeyan said the results were achieved through strict enforcement, Intelligence-based operations, and special drives carried out by the rural district police.

He emphasised that the increase reflected improved detection and policing rather than a rise in drug-related activity.

The Coimbatore rural police also intensified action against the illegal sale and manufacture of alcohol during the year. As part of the drive, police conducted 12,940 raids and registered 3,921 cases.

KAVITHA LAUNCHES PARTY

Kalvakuntla Kavitha Announces Telangana Jagruthi's Transformation

HYDERABAD

Kalvakuntla Kavitha on Monday delivered an emotional farewell speech in the Telangana Legislative Council, announcing that Telangana Jagruthi, the organisation she heads, will be transformed into a full-fledged political party. The announcement marks a major political development in the state and signals the emergence of a new political force ahead of future elections.

Kavitha, the daughter of former Telangana Chief Minister and Bharat Rashtra Samithi (BRS) president K. Chandrasekhar Rao, alleged that she had faced utter humiliation within the party, which ultimately led to her political isolation. She had resigned from the BRS after being suspended and had also submitted her resignation as a Member of the Legislative Council (MLC) in September last year. During Monday's session, she urged the Council Chairman to formally accept her resignation, describing the address as her final speech in the House.

Recalling her political journey, Kavitha said she had founded Telangana Jagruthi as a cultural organisation during the Telangana statehood movement to preserve regional identity and raise social awareness. She announced that the organisation would now be converted into a political party to directly address the aspirations of people who, she said, were feeling unheard. A new political platform is coming up in the State. It will work for students, unemployed youth and all other sections, she declared.

Visibly emotional, Kavitha appealed to people to bless her new political journey. She said she had snapped ties with her paternal political home after suffering repeated humiliation. I am stepping out for the people, she said, adding that the decision had not been easy but was necessary to uphold her self-respect and political convictions.

She also vowed to return to the Legislature as a stronger force. I am going out of the Legislature as an individual today, but I will return as a political force, she asserted, expressing confidence that Telangana Jagruthi would contest the next elections and emerge as a significant player in state politics. Kavitha alleged that certain individuals around her father had conspired against her, leading to her marginalisation within the BRS and eventual exit.

ONGC may get unpaid dividend of $500 mn from its Venezuelan oil project

Caracas

ONGC may receive nearly $500 million in unpaid dividends from its Venezuelan oil project as the evolving US-Venezuela situation has revived expectations of long-pending payouts from the South American nation, global brokerage firm Jefferies has said. Market experts are anticipating that a potential US takeover of Venezuela's oil industry could eventually lead to the lifting of sanctions on Venezuelan crude exports. Although US President Donald Trump has said that sanctions remain in place for now, any future relaxation could bring more oil supply into the global market, putting pressure on crude prices.

Business leaders hold talks on reopening Torkham border

Kabul

Business leaders of Afghanistan and Pakistan held discussions on reopening the Torkham border crossing, aiming to ease trade disruptions between two nations, local media reported on Monday. The Taliban-run Afghanistan Chamber of Commerce and Investment said that they and Pakistani counterparts agreed to establish a joint delegation to hold talks on reopening the Torkham border crossing. In a statement, the chamber said Pakistan's Chamber of Industry offered to hold talks during a virtual meeting, a proposal accepted by the Afghan side to ease trade disruptions.

World watches as geopolitical tensions rise in S.America

Trajectory of crisis remains uncertain, several scenarios appear possible, Int'l pressure could lead to negotiated settlements

WASHINGTON

The international community finds itself at a critical juncture as tensions surrounding Venezuela intensify, sparking fierce debate about the true motivations behind foreign intervention and the role of international institutions in protecting smaller nations from superpower influence.

Venezuela sits atop the world's largest proven oil reserves, an estimated 300 billion barrels that have long made the nation a focal point of global energy politics. Simultaneously, the country has become a significant transit point in international drug trafficking networks, with various criminal organizations operating within its borders.

These two realities have created competing narratives about foreign interest in Venezuelan affairs. Supporters of intervention cite the drug trafficking crisis, pointing to the destabilizing effects of narcotics flowing through the region and the humanitarian concerns surrounding cartel violence. Critics, however, argue that oil reserves remain the primary motivation, suggesting that concerns about drug trafficking serve as convenient justification for accessing Venezuela's vast energy resources.

The pattern is familiar, notes Dr. Maria Rodriguez, a Latin American affairs specialist at Georgetown University. Whenever a resource-rich nation faces instability, questions arise about whether humanitarian concerns are genuine or merely pretexts for economic interests.

The timing of heightened tensions coincides with global energy market volatility, lending credence to those who view resource access as a driving factor. Venezuela's oil industry, severely degraded by years of underinvestment and mismanagement, represents both an opportunity and a challenge for foreign interests seeking to secure energy supplies.

The United Nations' Delicate Position

The United Nations finds itself in an increasingly difficult position, balancing its mandate to protect sovereignty with growing humanitarian concerns. The UN Charter explicitly prohibits the use of force against the territorial integrity of any state, yet also calls for collective action against threats to international peace and security.

UN Secretary-General's office has called for dialogue and de-escalation, emphasizing diplomatic solutions over military action. However, the organization's effectiveness remains constrained by the structure of the Security Council, where permanent members hold veto power. This architectural limitation has historically prevented decisive action when major powers are directly or indirectly involved in conflicts.

Several UN agencies have increased their presence in the region, with the World Food Programme and UNHCR expanding operations to address humanitarian needs. Yet critics argue these measures amount to treating symptoms rather than addressing root causes. Smaller nations have voiced frustration at the UN General Assembly, with representatives from Caribbean and Central American states expressing concern that international law appears to apply selectively based on a nation's size and power.

What Lies Ahead?

The trajectory of this crisis remains uncertain, but several scenarios appear possible. International pressure could lead to negotiated settlements that address both security concerns and respect for sovereignty. Regional organizations like the Organization of American States may play increasingly important roles in mediating disputes and monitoring any agreements.

Alternatively, prolonged instability could trigger a humanitarian crisis that draws deeper international involvement, potentially creating a protracted conflict with ripple effects throughout the region. Migration patterns, already strained, could intensify as civilians flee violence and economic hardship. Neighboring countries, particularly Colombia and Brazil, face the prospect of absorbing additional refugees while managing their own domestic challenges.

The economic implications extend globally. Energy markets remain sensitive to supply disruptions, and any escalation affecting Venezuelan oil production could impact prices worldwide. Meanwhile, drug trafficking organizations may exploit chaos to strengthen their operations, potentially increasing narcotics flows to consumer markets in North America and Europe.

A Test for International Order

Ultimately, this crisis represents a test for the international system's ability to protect smaller nations from coercion while addressing legitimate security concerns. The world watches to see whether diplomacy and international law will prevail, or whether raw power politics will determine Venezuela's future. The answer will have implications far beyond South America, potentially setting precedents for how the global community responds to similar situations in the years ahead.

As tensions continue, one certainty remains: the Venezuelan people, caught between geopolitical forces beyond their control, deserve a resolution that prioritizes their safety, dignity, and right to self-determination.

Paris Court Convicts 10 for Cyber-Harassment

PARIS

A Paris court on Monday found 10 individuals guilty of cyber-harassment against Brigitte Macron, after they spread false and malicious claims alleging that she is a transgender woman who was born male. French media reported that the ruling marks a significant legal victory for the French first lady and her husband, Emmanuel Macron, who have increasingly taken legal action to counter years of online abuse and disinformation.

The case centred on long-circulating conspiracy theories claiming that Brigitte Macron was born under the name Jean-Michel Trogneux — in reality the name of her older brother. Prosecutors argued that the defendants deliberately amplified these falsehoods online, targeting her gender identity and sexuality in what the court deemed a coordinated campaign of harassment. The eight men and two women convicted also made degrading comparisons between the Macrons' 24-year age difference and paedophilia, further intensifying the abuse.

Uganda Bans Broadcasts of Unrest Ahead of Prez Polls

KAMPALA

Uganda imposed sweeping media restrictions as election tensions rise, with President Museveni seeking to extend his decades-long rule.

Uganda's government on Monday announced a ban on live broadcasts and streaming of riots, unlawful processions, and other violent incidents ahead of the country's January 15 presidential election, drawing concern from opposition groups and human rights organisations. The directive was issued as Yoweri Museveni, 81, seeks to extend his nearly four-decade grip on power.

In a statement, the Ministry of Information, Communication and Technology said live coverage of such events was prohibited because it could escalate tensions and spread panic. Authorities also barred the dissemination of content described as inciting, hateful or violent. In Uganda, critics note that officials frequently label anti-government demonstrations as riots, raising fears that the new restrictions could further limit independent reporting and political expression.

The election will once again pit Museveni against his most prominent challenger, Bobi Wine, a 43-year-old pop-star-turned politician who has emerged as a symbol of youth-led opposition. In the weeks leading up to the vote, security forces have detained hundreds of opposition supporters, according to rights groups and local activists.

Uganda's last election in 2021 was marred by violence, with more than 50 people killed during crackdowns by security forces on Wine's supporters. At the time, the opposition accused Museveni of rigging the polls, allegations the president firmly denied. Museveni, who came to power in 1986 after leading a five-year rebellion, is Africa's third-longest-ruling head of state. Human rights organisations have raised fresh alarms. Amnesty International said on Monday that Ugandan security forces had launched a brutal campaign of repression in the run-up to the election, accusing them of arbitrary arrests, beatings, and torture of opposition supporters.

Trump Threatens Colombia

MARYLAND

Diplomatic relations across the Americas were jolted after Donald Trump publicly threatened Colombia's leadership and suggested potential action against Havana, following Washington's controversial abduction of Venezuela's leader Nicolas Maduro. The remarks, while Trump was speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One, triggered swift condemnation from multiple countries and intensified concerns over regional stability.

Trump described Colombia and Venezuela as very sick countries and launched a personal attack on Colombian President Gustavo Petro, accusing him of links to cocaine production and trafficking into the United States. And he's not going to be doing it very long, Trump said, adding to the severity of his comments. When asked whether he was hinting at a possible

US operation against Colombia, Trump responded, Sounds good to me, a remark that further inflamed diplomatic tensions.

The comments came as Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Mexico, Uruguay, and Spain jointly condemned the US action against Maduro, calling it a dangerous precedent for peace and regional security. Regional leaders and diplomats warned that such actions risk destabilising Latin America and undermining international norms governing sovereignty and non-intervention.

President Petro responded sharply, urging Trump to stop slandering him and warning that Latin America must unite or risk being treated as a servant and slave. In a series of detailed posts on X, Petro recalled historical grievances, noting that the United States was the first country in the world to bomb a South American capital in all of human history. However, he stressed that retaliation was not the solution.

Zelenskiy Appoints Ex-Canadian Dy PM as Economic Devpt Adviser

KYIV

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy announced on Monday the appointment of Canada's former deputy prime minister Chrystia Freeland as his economic development adviser, highlighting her extensive experience in attracting international investment and managing complex economic challenges.

In a statement posted on X, Zelenskiy said Ukraine must urgently strengthen its internal resilience as it continues to confront the prolonged impact of war. He noted that economic stability would be critical both for rapid national recovery if diplomatic efforts deliver results quickly, and for reinforcing the country's defence capabilities should the conflict persist because of delays in support from international partners.

Right now, Ukraine needs to strengthen its internal resilience – both for the sake of Ukraine's recovery if diplomacy delivers results as swiftly as possible, and to reinforce our defence if, because of delays by our partners, it takes longer to bring this war to an end, Zelenskiy wrote. He added that Freeland's background in economic policy, global diplomacy, and investment promotion made her well suited to advise Ukraine at a crucial juncture.

Freeland, who served as Canada's deputy prime minister from 2019 to 2024, is currently a lawmaker in the Canadian parliament and also acts as Ottawa's special envoy to Ukraine.

SWISS BAR FIRE

Pressure Mounts for Answers after Deadly NY Bar Fire

MONTANA

Pressure intensified on Swiss authorities on Monday as investigators faced mounting demands for clarity and accountability following a devastating New Year bar fire in the Alpine ski resort of Crans-Montana that claimed 40 lives. Officials confirmed that all victims had now been formally identified, with most found to be teenagers, deepening the national sense of shock and mourning.

The tragedy occurred in the early hours of January 1, when a fire tore through the basement of the popular Le Constellation bar. Prosecutors in the canton of Valais said preliminary findings suggest the blaze was likely triggered when sparkling candles ignited the bar's ceiling, allowing flames to spread rapidly through the enclosed space. Many victims reportedly had little chance to escape as smoke and fire engulfed the venue.

The tight-knit Alpine community united in grief, with residents, tourists, and officials gathering to lay flowers and light candles outside the destroyed bar. Condolences poured in from around the world, including messages from Pope Leo and Chinese President Xi Jinping, reflecting the scale of the tragedy and the international profile of the resort.

Swiss prosecutors have opened a criminal investigation into the two individuals who operated the bar, examining possible offences including homicide by negligence. Authorities said that, at present, the circumstances did not justify placing the couple under arrest, citing a lack of flight risk and the need for further evidence before taking coercive measures. That decision, however, has fuelled growing public frustration.

On Monday morning, the Swiss daily Blick captured the rising anger in a stark front-page headline asking, Why are the couple running the bar free? The headline appeared above a photograph showing mourners and journalists gathered around a massive pile of flowers and tributes outside Le Constellation, symbolising both grief and unresolved questions.

Legal experts note that Swiss investigations involving mass-casualty incidents can take time, as authorities must carefully reconstruct events, assess safety compliance, and determine individual responsibility. Still, families of the victims and members of the public are increasingly calling for transparency and swift justice.

COAI calls for fair D2M testing process

New Delhi

The Cellular Operators Association of India (COAI) urged authorities to follow a transparent and inclusive method while testing Direct-to-Mobile broadcasting. COAI said recent trials did not match the government's planned framework. Director General S.P. Kochhar warned D2M could affect spectrum, networks, devices, and consumer safety. He stressed that all stakeholders must be involved. The group recalled that the Information and Broadcasting Ministry in September 2025 ordered detailed evaluations with clear rules. COAI said limited testing, without telecom operators and device makers, weakens trust. It added issues like certification, safety rules, licensing, usage, and device readiness were ignored.

Waaree arm raises Rs 1,003 crore funding

New Delhi

Waaree Energies on Monday said its unit, Waaree Energy Storage Solutions, has raised Rs 1,003 crore from strategic investors. The investors include family offices, high net worth individuals, and institutional backers. The funding supports the company's Rs 10,000 crore capital spending plan. The plan aims to set up a 20 GWh advanced lithium-ion cell and battery pack manufacturing plant. The upcoming facility will make high performance cells and battery packs. These products will be used for utility scale energy storage, electric mobility, and distributed energy needs across India. The investment also strengthens domestic manufacturing and supports India's clean energy goals.

Centre boosts fertiliser subsidy for Rabi farmers

The scheme boosted domestic fertiliser production 50%, from 112 to 169 lakh tonnes, with Rs 2.04 lakh crore

NEW DELHI

The Centre has planned to spend Rs 37,952 crore on fertiliser subsidies for farmers during the current Rabi season of 2025–26. The amount is around Rs 736 crore higher than the subsidy requirement for the previous Kharif 2025 season, according to an official government statement released on Monday.

The subsidy support will be provided under the nutrient based subsidy scheme, with approved rates effective from October One, 2025, to March Thirty One, 2026. The support will cover phosphatic and potassic fertilisers, including widely used products such as DAP and NPKS grades, ensuring steady supply during the sowing period.

Officials said the scheme has helped domestic fertiliser production grow by nearly fifty per cent over the last decade. Production increased from about 112 lakh metric tonnes in 2014 to nearly 169 lakh metric tonnes in 2025. Between 2022–23 and 2024–25 more than Rs 2.04 lakh crore was allocated to keep fertilisers affordable for farmers.

The government said the nutrient based subsidy scheme has become a key pillar of India's fertiliser policy. It promotes balanced fertiliser use, better soil health, and sustainable farming practices across states. Digital tracking through the Integrated Fertilizer Management System has improved transparency, timely distribution, and coordination with state governments.

Introduced in 2010, the scheme links subsidies to nutrient content such as nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, and sulphur. This helps farmers choose fertilisers based on crop and soil needs, while also addressing soil degradation and long term nutrient imbalance. Officials believe the continued support will protect farmer incomes, improve yields, reduce import dependence, and strengthen national food security in coming agricultural seasons across the country.

'INDIA WILL BE A MAJOR PLAYER IN ELECTRONICS STACK'

NEW DELHI

Vaishnaw announced four semiconductor plants will start commercial production this year, while electronics manufacturing jobs reached 25 lakh, with some factories employing over 5,000 workers each

Union Electronics and Information Technology Minister Ashwini Vaishnaw on Monday said India is set to become a major player across the entire electronics value chain, covering design, manufacturing, operating systems, applications, materials, and equipment.

He said the growth supports Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Make in India vision and the goal of building a strong producer economy.

In a social media post, Vaishnaw highlighted that Apple shipped mobile phones worth about 50 billion dollars from India in 2025, calling it a major milestone.

The minister said electronics production has increased sixfold in the last eleven years, while electronics exports have grown eight times. Electronics products are now among the country's top three export items. He added that forty six component manufacturing projects, along with laptop, server, and hearable makers, are strengthening the manufacturing base.

Vaishnaw said four semiconductor plants will begin commercial production this year. Total jobs in electronics manufacturing have reached twenty five lakh, with some factories employing over five thousand workers at one site.

Industry groups recently welcomed approval of twenty two new projects under the electronics components scheme. These projects are expected to attract over Rs 54,500 crore in investment, generate large scale production, and create nearly thirty four thousand direct jobs.

Officials said the rapid expansion shows rising industry confidence and marks only the beginning of India's electronics growth story ahead. The government believes stronger local supply chains, skilled jobs, and advanced technology will reduce imports, boost exports, support innovation, and help India compete globally in the coming years. This push is expected to benefit startups, workers, and consumers across the country alike.

Asia leads public trust in fair tax systems

NEW DELHI

Public trust in taxation remains strongest across Asia, with India standing out for its high confidence in tax fairness and the overall fiscal system, according to a new global report released on Monday.

The study found that nearly forty five per cent of Indian respondents believe tax money is spent for the public good. Around forty one per cent see paying taxes as a contribution to society rather than a financial burden, showing a strong sense of shared civic duty.

Ethical standards among Indian taxpayers were also high. About sixty eight per cent said they would never justify cheating on taxes, even if they had the chance. This reflects growing respect for rules and fairness in the tax system. The report highlighted India's strong link between taxation and sustainability. Nearly eighty per cent of respondents said they were willing to pay extra tax to support sustainable development goals, showing public support for long term social and environmental progress.

SAIL records highest ever steel sales in Dec

NEW DELHI

Steel Authority of India Limited, known as SAIL, recorded its highest ever December sales at two point one million tonnes, marking a strong thirty seven per cent rise over the one point five million tonnes sold in December last year.

The company said this was its best performance for the month, with record sales across product categories and channels. Strong focus on customer deliveries and faster movement of stock helped reduce inventory levels. SAIL has also stepped up branding efforts in recent months to strengthen market reach.

The strong December showing helped SAIL maintain solid momentum during the current financial year. Total sales volume between April and December 2025 reached fourteen point seven million tonnes, around seventeen per cent higher than the same period a year earlier.

Exports also rose sharply during the month, highlighting SAIL's expanding global presence alongside steady domestic demand. The company said its improved performance reflects stronger market positioning, customer focused initiatives, and better operational efficiency.

Ueda said Japan's economy moderately recovered last year, with stable wage and price growth supporting sustainable economic expansion

Japan central bank signals further interest rate hikes

TOKYO

Bank of Japan Governor Kazuo Ueda on Monday said the central bank will continue to raise interest rates if economic growth and inflation move in line with official forecasts, signalling a steady shift away from years of ultra-loose monetary policy. Speaking to a banking industry gathering, Ueda said Japan's economy showed moderate recovery last year despite pressure on company profits from higher United States tariffs. He added that wages and prices are likely to rise together at a stable pace, supporting sustainable economic growth.

The central bank recently raised its policy interest rate to zero point seven five per cent from zero point five per cent, marking the highest level in nearly thirty years. The move reflects the Bank of Japan's effort to gradually normalise policy after decades of near zero rates and heavy stimulus.

Despite the increase, real borrowing costs remain negative as inflation has stayed above the bank's two per cent target for almost four years. Rising prices, partly driven by a weaker yen, have increased import costs and added to inflationary pressure across the economy.

Markets are now closely watching the Bank of Japan's policy meeting scheduled for January twenty two and twenty three. Investors expect the central bank's outlook report to provide clues on how officials assess the impact of the yen's recent fall on inflation.

The yen weakened further on Monday, while government bond yields climbed, reflecting expectations of more rate hikes ahead. The ten year government bond yield briefly touched its highest level in over twenty five years. Finance Minister Satsuki Katayama said Japan is at a crucial stage of moving away from deflation toward a growth focused economy. Analysts said steady policy moves will be key to balancing inflation control with economic stability in the months ahead.

Indian IT revenue growth seen improving ahead

NEW DELHI

The Indian information technology sector is expected to see a recovery in revenue growth to four to five per cent in the financial year 2026–27, according to a new research report released on Monday. The improvement is likely to support high single digit growth in earnings per share, offering some relief after a long period of slow expansion.

The report by HSBC Global Investment Research said IT stocks, which have already risen about fifteen per cent from recent lows, may now move largely in line with the broader market during 2026. The firm noted that the sector is no longer a long term double digit growth story and will behave in a more cyclical manner than before.

Researchers said IT stocks may need active management, as performance will depend on business cycles and changing demand. A possible cyclical rebound during calendar year 2026 or financial year 2026–27 could still offer limited upside from current levels.

The report added that the third quarter of the ongoing financial year was affected by weak seasonal demand and is unlikely to deliver positive surprises. Company level signals were mixed, reflecting caution among clients.

HSBC India's head of research Yogesh Aggarwal said earlier expectations of IT outperforming the market have softened. He said part of the expected recovery has already been priced in, as IT stocks rose fifteen to twenty per cent between October and December 2025, compared to a six per cent rise in the Nifty.

Customer commentary pointed to improving confidence and higher willingness to spend on technology. Analysts also said concerns around artificial intelligence are easing steadily nationwide.

Apple's iPhone exports from India hit $50 billion

NEW DELHI

Apple's iPhone exports from India crossed $50 billion by December 2025 under the government's production linked incentive (PLI) scheme. The milestone was driven by shipments from five assembly plants, three run by Tata Group and two by Foxconn, supported by 45 local suppliers. In FY26's first nine months, iPhone exports reached nearly $16 billion. Smartphones now form India's largest export category, up from 167th in 2015. Apple sold 6.5 million iPhone 16 units in 2025, topping sales charts. Samsung's five year PLI exports stood at $17 billion. The scheme ends March 2026, with extensions under discussion to support growth further.

Trump's Venezuela move raises fresh investor risks

SINGAPORE

Global markets stayed mostly calm after the United States captured Venezuelan President Nicolas Maduro, but some investors warned that geopolitical risks may be underestimated as tensions rise in the Americas.

Asian stock markets rose on Monday, while oil prices slipped slightly. Gold prices edged higher as investors sought some safety. Analysts said the muted reaction was partly because Venezuela's oil production is small compared to global supply and would need years of investment to rise sharply.

However, investors said the move signals a tougher and more direct US foreign policy under President Donald Trump. It marked the first major US intervention in Latin America since Panama in 1989 and revived concerns about wider regional instability.

Market experts warned that the long-term impact could be larger than what prices currently reflect. They said risks could spread beyond Venezuela if tensions increase with other countries in the region.

Trump said US oil companies would invest to revive Venezuela's oil infrastructure, potentially unlocking the country's vast reserves over time. While this could support global energy supply in the future, analysts believe near-term benefits remain limited.

Some investors also questioned the wider implications of US actions for China, Taiwan, and Iran. However, analysts noted that markets have grown used to frequent geopolitical shocks and now react mainly when supply chains or economic growth are directly threatened. Global stocks entered 2026 on a strong note after ending last year near record highs. Analysts said defence stocks may benefit as countries increase military spending, while uncertainty around US policy could weaken the dollar further.

Experts cautioned that geopolitical tensions are becoming a constant feature of markets. While investors may appear calm for now, sudden escalation could quickly test confidence and reshape global risk appetite in the months ahead.

BOK warns uneven recovery amid economic gaps

SEOUL

Bank of Korea Governor (BOK) Rhee Chang-yong warned on Monday that South Korea's economic recovery this year may be uneven, with clear gaps between industries and a growing difference between official growth numbers and how citizens feel.

Speaking at a meeting with leaders of financial firms and industry officials in Seoul, Rhee said economic polarization and uncertainty are likely to continue. The meeting was also attended by senior regulators, including the heads of the Financial Services Commission and the Financial Supervisory Service.

Rhee explained that while overall growth is expected to improve compared to last year, the recovery may take a "K-shaped" form. This means some sectors may perform well, while others struggle, leaving many households feeling left behind.

He pointed to unstable global trade conditions, changing fiscal policies in major economies, and shifting expectations around the global artificial intelligence industry as key risks this year.

Rhee said the central bank will take a careful and flexible approach to monetary policy. He stressed the need to closely watch growth, inflation, and financial stability as uncertainty increases.

DISCOUNTED CRUDE ACCESS

Indian refiners may benefit from Venezuela turmoil

NEW DELHI

Indian oil refiners could gain from recent developments involving the United States and Venezuela, according to a new brokerage report released on Monday. The report said that access to heavier Venezuelan crude oil, which usually trades at a discount to Brent prices, may improve refining margins for Indian companies. Choice Institutional Equities noted that India earlier imported up to four hundred thousand barrels per day of Venezuelan crude. If restrictions ease, Indian refiners may again source these heavier barrels, which suit complex refineries and offer better value.

The report also said Indian upstream firms could receive access to equipment and investment opportunities. This may help raise output from Venezuelan oil fields such as San Cristobal and Carabobo One over time.

Analysts expect Brent crude to average around sixty one point five dollars per barrel in calendar year 2026. Limited new supply is likely this year, though fresh Venezuelan output could put pressure on prices from next year.

Heavier crude from Venezuela may push simpler refineries out of the market globally. At the same time, complex refineries in India and China could benefit, improving profit spreads over the medium term.

However, a sharp rise in Venezuelan output is unlikely soon. Years of low investment have weakened its oil sector. In a best case scenario, production may rise by about one hundred fifty thousand barrels per day in 2026.

Venezuela holds the world's largest oil reserves but current output remains far below past levels, the report added. Indian refiners are watching developments closely as global energy markets adjust rapidly this year.

BEYOND DEMOCRACY:
THE HIDDEN POWER PLAYS IN AMERICA'S VENEZUELA INTERVENTION
When democracy becomes a veil

On January 3, 2026, as dawn broke over Caracas, U.S. military forces executed what officials called a "large-scale strike" on Venezuelan military installations. Within hours, President Nicolás Maduro and his wife, Cilia Flores, were airlifted aboard a U.S. warship heading toward New York, where they face criminal indictment on narco-terrorism conspiracy charges. The official U.S. narrative was swift and familiar: an authoritarian regime had oppressed its people, enabled drug trafficking, and threatened American security. The military operation, by this account, was an act of justice.

But beneath this framework lies a more complex truth. The escalation that culminated in Maduro's capture was not a sudden decision. It followed a four-month campaign of military strikes on alleged drug-smuggling boats in Caribbean and Pacific waters—strikes that killed at least 115 people, many of them never definitively identified as criminals. It included the seizure of oil tankers laden with Venezuelan crude, tankers that represented not just revenue but survival for a nation strangled by sanctions. And it depended on framing a complex political and economic crisis as primarily a narcotics and terrorism problem, when the evidence suggests oil, power, and containment of rival influences were always at the core.

The Double Language of Intervention

- Official claim: Fighting drug cartels and protecting democracy
- Strategic reality: Controlling oil flows, excluding China and Russia, reasserting U.S. hemispheric dominance
- Evidence: Military escalation began after Maduro said Venezuela was open to drug-trafficking talks; tanker seizures and oil blockades continued after arrest
- Global implication: Sets precedent for framing resource competition as humanitarian rescue

Economic sanctions as an instrument of control

The Architecture of Economic Strangulation

The United States has wielded sanctions against Venezuela since at least 2005, initially framed as punishment for inadequate drug cooperation. But the scope and precision of these measures evolved dramatically, particularly under Trump administrations. What began as targeted personal sanctions on government officials transformed into comprehensive financial blockades affecting Venezuela's most vital sector: oil.

By 2019-2020, Washington prohibited transactions with PDVSA—Venezuela's state oil company—effectively cutting Caracas from the international financial system. Subsequent measures targeted shipping, tankers, insurance, and banks willing to process Venezuelan transactions. Each new sanction operated on the same principle: not just to punish Caracas, but to make the cost of doing business with Venezuela so prohibitive that other nations' companies and governments would abandon the relationship.

The impact was devastating but selective. Venezuelan oil production plummeted from 3 million barrels per day at its peak (1997) to under 950,000 barrels by 2025, with crude reserves literally sitting in storage tanks because sanctioned tankers could not move them. The government's revenue collapsed, cascading into shortages of food, medicine, and fuel. Yet while sanctions crushed Venezuela's people, they did not dislodge the Maduro regime—a fact that suggests punishment, not regime change, was never the sole objective.

Instead, sanctions served a triple purpose:

First, they weakened Venezuela economically and militarily, making any armed resistance to U.S. pressure increasingly untenable. By December 2025, when the U.S. imposed a formal blockade on sanctioned oil tankers, Venezuela's military was in no position to contest American naval supremacy in its own waters.

Second, they redirected Venezuela's oil toward Asia—specifically China and Russia—because those were the only partners willing to defy U.S. pressure and still buy Venezuelan crude. This deepened Caracas' dependence on Beijing and Moscow, exactly the opposite of what Washington claimed to want (independence from authoritarian allies) but precisely aligned with revealing the true strategic goal: not Venezuela's autonomy, but control over who dominates it. If Caracas had to choose between Washington and Beijing, sanctions ensured Beijing was the default option—until the military pressure became too great.

Third, sanctions created the economic chaos that fueled mass migration, destabilizing neighboring countries and providing a humanitarian crisis that justified further U.S. intervention.

Financial Leverage as Geopolitical Coercion

- Sanction scope: Oil exports, tankers, banks, insurance, digital currency, debt, mining
- Mechanism: Cut off Venezuela from dollar system → force reliance on China/Russia → create pretext for intervention
- Collateral damage: 8+ million Venezuelans displaced since crisis began; regional economies strained
- Precedent risk: Establishes U.S. financial system as unilateral enforcement tool; erodes trust in international banking norms

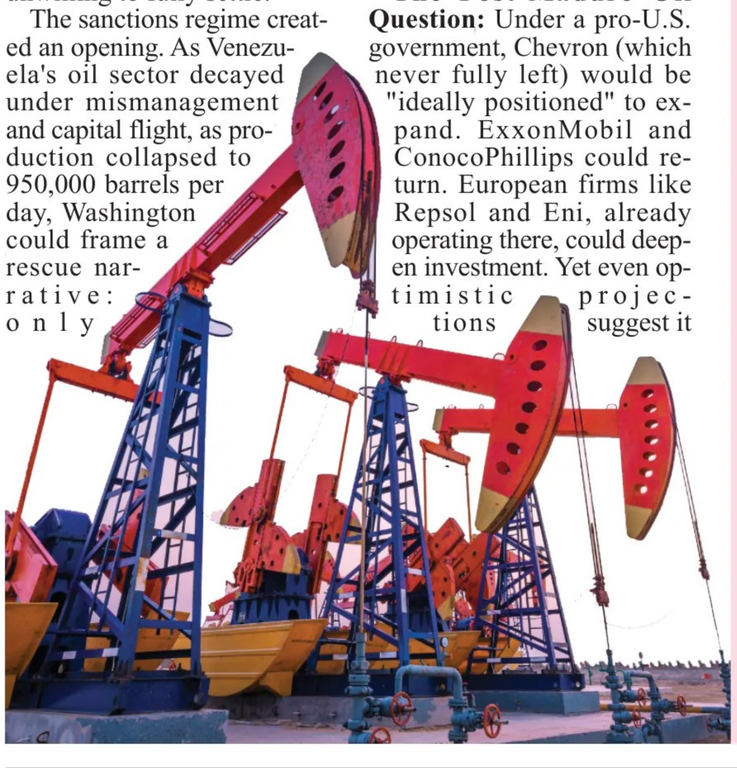
The Energy Game— Oil Reserves and Global Control

Venezuela's curse: 304 billion barrels

Venezuela possesses the world's largest proven oil reserves—approximately 304 billion barrels of heavy, viscous crude locked beneath the Orinoco Belt. This is not easy oil. Extracting and refining it requires specialized infrastructure, technical expertise, and massive upfront investment. But for refineries adapted to heavy crude—particularly those in the U.S. Gulf Coast—Venezuelan oil is irreplaceable. It is also strategically significant because it is outside the Middle East, outside OPEC+ politics, and, if controlled by a U.S.-aligned government, immune to disruption by rivals.

For four decades, starting in the 1970s when Venezuela nationalized its oil sector and created PDVSA, this resource was Venezuelan—owned and (theoretically) controlled by Caracas. American companies like Chevron, ExxonMobil, and ConocoPhillips operated as partners, taking profits but under Venezuelan sovereignty. Then came Hugo Chávez and the 2004-2007 "renegotiation" of contracts. Chávez forced oil companies to accept less favorable terms, increased state royalties, and asserted Venezuelan control more explicitly. U.S. firms chafed; some, like ExxonMobil and ConocoPhillips, left and subsequently sued for compensation—claims that Venezuela has been unable or unwilling to fully settle.

The sanctions regime created an opening. As Venezuela's oil sector decayed under mismanagement and capital flight, as production collapsed to 950,000 barrels per day, Washington could frame a rescue narrative: only U.S. investment, U.S. technical expertise, and U.S. corporate involvement could restore Venezuela's oil sector. And indeed, President Trump explicitly stated, post-Maduro, that he wants U.S. oil companies to "come in, invest billions" and "begin generating revenue." This language—"come in" to fix a broken nation—echoes colonial-era paternalism, yet it reveals the endgame: control of Venezuela's resources through corporate and financial mechanisms.



The Post-Maduro Oil Question: Under a pro-U.S. government, Chevron (which never fully left) would be "ideally positioned" to expand. ExxonMobil and ConocoPhillips could return. European firms like Repsol and Eni, already operating there, could deepen investment. Yet even optimistic projections suggest it will take 7-10 years and at least $10 billion annually to restore Venezuela's oil sector to meaningful production levels. The market, meanwhile, is currently oversupplied. A flood of Venezuelan oil in coming years could depress prices—bad for producers globally, good for consumers, but geopolitically interesting because it would reinforce U.S. ability to manage energy supplies to allies and against rivals

Resource Control as the Hidden Prize

- Reserve size: 304 billion barrels—world's largest proven reserves
- Current production: Under 950,000 b/d (down from 3 million b/d in 1997)
- U.S. corporate interest: Chevron present; ExxonMobil, ConocoPhillips, Repsol, Eni poised to return
- Geopolitical payoff: Control oil supply to allies, deny to China/Russia, manage global prices via U.S.-aligned producers
- Global consequence: Energy supply stability for refineries worldwide; potential price volatility if rapid production expansion occurs; model for future resource-driven interventions

The geopolitical chessboard—Containing Rivals

China's Energy Hedge, Russia's Strategic Play

For the past fifteen years, Venezuela has been one of China's most important external investments. Beijing extended tens of billions of dollars in loans to Caracas, accepting repayment in oil—a transaction that gave China a long-term, non-dollar energy supply that bypassed the Suez Canal and Middle Eastern dependency. Even as sanctions squeezed Venezuelan revenues, Chinese tankers still moved crude across the Pacific. Russian firms, meanwhile, provided financial services, technical support, and a geopolitical alliance that kept Maduro's regime from appearing completely isolated.

The U.S. has watched this deepening alignment with growing alarm. In U.S. strategic documents, Venezuela under Maduro represented a beachhead for "extra-hemispheric powers" (code for China and Russia) in America's traditional sphere of influence. From Washington's perspective, the longer Maduro remained in power, the longer China and Russia could cement economic and political ties that would persist even after regime change.

The military operation and Maduro's capture represent a decisive U.S. move to reset this board. A pro-U.S. government in Caracas would almost certainly renegotiate Venezuela's oil-for-loans agreements with China, potentially defaulting on Chinese debts or restructuring them unfavorably to Beijing. It would exclude Russian interests from Venezuela's military and financial sectors. Most critically, it would reestablish U.S. ability to shape Venezuelan policy, making Venezuela once again a stable, predictable asset in American strategic calculations rather than a variable controlled by competitors.

The Great Power Subtext

- China's position: 15+ years of investment; loan repayment guarantees via oil; reduced Middle Eastern dependency
- Russia's position: Financial and military partnership with Maduro; maintains hemispheric counterweight to U.S.
- U.S. objective: Exclude both from post-Maduro Venezuela; reestablish Western Hemisphere as uncontested sphere
- Risk of miscalculation: If U.S. transition fails, China/Russia could support rival Venezuelan factions, prolonging conflict
- Global consequence: Model for how resource competition between powers can trigger military intervention; template for other contested regions

Lessons and Precedent for Future Conflicts

A playbook for great-power competition

The Venezuela Playbook Goes Global

- Template elements: Criminal designation → sanctions → military strikes → information control → regime change → resource restructuring
- Applicability: Can be adapted to other regions; sets precedent for unilateral action
- Counter-responses: Powers building alternative payment systems; nations diversifying alignments; global stability undermined
- Sovereignty erosion: Smaller nations increasingly vulnerable; international law weakened
- Precedent cost: Future interventions (even legitimate ones) will be viewed through lens of Venezuela; trust in institutional frameworks declines

The Venezuela operation serves as a template—whether intentionally or not—for how powerful states can pursue geopolitical objectives under the cover of counternarcotics and counterterrorism. This template can be applied elsewhere. A future administration could apply similar measures to other governments it opposes—say, in Central America, the Middle East, or even closer U.S. allies that diverge from Washington's preferences. Once the precedent is accepted, the template becomes available to all. Other powers are watching carefully. China is analyzing how to protect its overseas investments from similar pressure. Russia is considering how to insulate its allies from targeted sanctions and military strikes. Nations in the Global South are rethinking their alignments and dependencies, aware that closeness to Washington or Beijing can each become a vulnerability.

The steps are now clear

1. Designate criminal organizations as terrorist entities, expanding executive authority
2. Impose comprehensive financial sanctions to strangle an adversary's economy and force reliance on rivals
3. Conduct military operations (strikes on alleged criminals, covert CIA actions) framed as law enforcement
4. Manage information through media campaigns and cyber operations
5. Allow humanitarian crisis (migration, shortages) to develop, blame on target regime
6. Mobilize multinational corporations positioned to profit from post-transition reconstruction

Bangladesh bans IPL telecast amid Mustafizur Rahman row with BCCI

Government suspends IPL broadcasts indefinitely, citing public anger over Mustafizur Rahman's removal

The Bangladesh government on Monday imposed an indefinite ban on the telecast and promotion of the Indian Premier League (IPL), escalating a controversy triggered by the release of national fast bowler Mustafizur Rahman from the Kolkata Knight Riders (KKR) squad ahead of the 2026 season.

In an official order issued on January 5, authorities directed all broadcasters, cable operators and advertisers to immediately suspend IPL-related programmes, promotions and event coverage across the country. The directive, approved by the competent authority, will remain in force until further notice and was described as a step taken in the "public interest".

The move follows KKR's decision to drop Mustafizur, a development that sparked widespread criticism and public anger in Bangladesh. The government maintained that no clear or reasonable explanation had been offered for the decision, prompting it to intervene.

"There is no logical reason for this decision of the Indian Cricket Board, and such a decision has distressed, shocked and angered the people of Bangladesh," the order stated. "As a result, the government has been compelled to take appropriate measures."

The order further said that a request had been made to stop the promotion and broadcast of all IPL games and events until further instructions.

Earlier, the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) had directed KKR to release the Bangladeshi pacer, citing "recent developments" without elaborating. BCCI secretary Devajit Saikia said the call was taken after reviewing the prevailing situation.

"Considering recent developments all across, KKR has been advised to release Mustafizur Rahman," Saikia said, adding that the franchise could seek a replacement player if required.

The controversy unfolded amid a broader political debate surrounding KKR's decision to sign the Bangladeshi fast bowler, against the backdrop of reports of violent incidents involving members of the Hindu community in Bangladesh in December. Mustafizur, one of Bangladesh's most recognisable cricketing figures and a seasoned IPL campaigner, was expected to play a key role for KKR in the upcoming season. Neither the BCCI nor the IPL has issued an official response to the Bangladesh government's ban so far.

No decision yet on Bangladesh players' participation in PGTI: Kapil Dev

NEW DELHI

Cricket legend and Professional Golf Tour of India (PGTI) president Kapil Dev on Monday said no decision has yet been taken on whether Bangladeshi golfers will be allowed to participate in PGTI events, amid heightened tensions between the two countries' sporting bodies.

Responding to questions on the issue, Kapil said the matter would be discussed internally before any call is made. "We'll sit down and talk about the recent issue. We haven't taken any decision on it yet," he said.

The comments come a day after the Bangladesh Cricket Board (BCB) decided not to send its national team to India for the upcoming T20 World Cup, citing security concerns and government advice. The decision followed the release of Bangladeshi pacer Mustafizur Rahman by IPL franchise Kolkata Knight Riders on the Board of Control for Cricket in India's instruction, a move that triggered diplomatic and sporting backlash.

Several prominent Bangladeshi golfers, including Jamal Hossain, Md Siddikur Rahman and Md Akbar Hossain, currently compete regularly on the PGTI Tour. Kapil, however, declined to comment on BCB's reported move to approach the International Cricket Council (ICC) over the issue.

The former India captain was speaking on the sidelines of the launch of a franchise of '72 The League', a new franchise-based golf league conceptualised by the PGTI to introduce a team format into the traditionally individual sport.

Kapil stressed that India must explore team-based structures in golf to accelerate the game's growth, drawing parallels with cricket's transformation following the advent of the Indian Premier League (IPL). "I played cricket, a team game. Golf is an individual sport, but India needs a team format in golf as well," he said.

Highlighting the impact of team dynamics, Kapil said individual excellence would always remain central to golf, but a collective format brings a different energy. "Individual brilliance will always prevail, but team sport hits different. Our vision is to make golfers experience team sport," he added.

Kapil also said the league's primary objective was to promote golfers and give them a stronger platform, noting that UP Prometheans have been announced as the first franchise of '72 The League, with more teams to follow in the coming weeks.

Damien Martyn leaves coma, speaking to loved ones

BRISBANE

Former Australia batter Damien Martyn has shown significant improvement after being taken out of an induced coma and is now able to speak with family members while recovering from meningitis in a Gold Coast hospital.

Cricket Australia confirmed on Monday that the 54-year-old, a two-time World Cup winner, is expected to be moved out of the intensive care unit after being admitted to hospital last week. The update comes as welcome news for the global cricket fraternity, which had rallied behind Martyn during his critical illness. Australian broadcaster Fox Sports reported during Day 2 of the fifth Ashes Test that Martyn was out of the coma and communicating with his loved ones. The report was later echoed by former teammate and close friend Adam Gilchrist, who described the past 48 hours as extraordinary.

"It's been an unbelievable turn of events in the last 48 hours. He is now able to talk and respond to treatment," Gilchrist said in a statement late Sunday. He added that Martyn was in good spirits and deeply touched by the messages of support he and his family have received.

Novak Djokovic cuts ties with PTPA Players' Association he co-founded

NEW YORK

Novak Djokovic has announced his decision to step away from the Professional Tennis Players Association (PTPA), the players' body he co-founded in 2020, saying his values no longer align with the organisation's current direction. The 24-time Grand Slam champion made the announcement in a social media post, citing concerns over transparency, governance and how his voice and image have been represented within the association. "My values and approach are no longer aligned with the current direction of the organization," Djokovic wrote.

Djokovic launched the PTPA alongside now-retired Canadian player Vasek Pospisil during the 2020 US Open, positioning it as an alternative representative body for professional tennis players, who largely operate as independent contractors. The association aimed to amplify players' voices and address long-standing issues related to earnings, scheduling and welfare.

Over time, one of the PTPA's stated ambitions was to evolve into a structure similar to a players' union, capable of negotiating collective bargaining agreements, as seen in team sports. However, such a framework has yet to materialise in professional tennis.

Last year, the PTPA filed a class-action lawsuit against the ATP, WTA, International Tennis Federation and the International Tennis Integrity Agency, accusing the sport's governing bodies of systemic abuse, anti-competitive practices and neglect of player welfare. The four Grand Slam tournaments were later added as defendants.

Djokovic was notably not listed as a plaintiff when the lawsuit was filed.

Neeraj Chopra parts ways with JSW Sports, launches own athlete management firm

NEW DELHI

Two-time Olympic medallist and India's javelin throw icon Neeraj Chopra has ended his long-standing association with JSW Sports and announced the launch of his own athlete management company, Vel Sports, marking a new chapter in his sporting journey.

Chopra, 27, had been associated with JSW Sports since 2016, a partnership that coincided with his rise from a promising junior athlete to one of India's most celebrated sporting figures. The decision, both parties said, was taken amicably and with mutual respect.

"Over the last decade, our journey together has been one of growth, belief, and achievement. JSW Sports has played a defining role in my career, and I'll always remain grateful for their support and vision," Chopra said in a statement. "As we conclude this chapter, I carry forward the same values into the next phase of my journey."

JSW Sports echoed the sentiment, underlining the shared philosophy that underpinned their collaboration. "Working with Neeraj has been an incredible experience for all of us at JSW Sports. His success story reflects our shared commitment to excellence and purpose," said Divyanshu Singh, CEO of JSW Sports. "We are immensely proud of what we have achieved together and wish him continued success in all his future pursuits."

During his time with JSW Sports, Chopra scaled unprecedented heights for Indian athletics. He became the first Indian to win an Olympic gold medal in track and field at the Tokyo Games in 2021, a landmark achievement that transformed him into a national sporting icon.

He went on to add a World Athletics Championship gold in 2023 and followed it up with a silver medal at the Paris Olympics in 2024, along with several podium finishes across the global circuit.

JOE ROOT

Equals Ponting with Sydney Ashes Century, Eyes Tendulkar's Record

SYDNEY

Joe Root continued his remarkable run in Test cricket by slamming his 41st century on Day 2 of the fifth and final Ashes Test at the Sydney Cricket Ground (SCG) on Monday, drawing level with Australia great Ricky Ponting on the all-time list of Test hundreds.

Root, who had waited years for his maiden Ashes century on Australian soil, did not take long to add another, underlining his status as one of the modern game's finest batters. The hundred came despite England already having lost the Ashes series, with Root standing tall in a struggling campaign for Ben Stokes' side.

With this milestone, Root is now the joint third-highest century-maker in Test cricket, alongside Ponting. Only Sachin Tendulkar (51 centuries) and Jacques Kallis (45) are ahead of him. Notably, Root reached his 41st hundred in his 163rd Test, quicker than Ponting, who achieved the feat in 168 matches during a career that yielded 13,378 runs.

The 35-year-old England batter has also quietly climbed the ladder in terms of aggregate runs. Root has already overtaken Ponting and Kumar Sangakkara on the all-time Test run charts, further strengthening his case as a potential challenger to Tendulkar's long-standing records. He is now less than 2,000 runs away from the Indian legend's mark of most runs in Test cricket, a target that appears increasingly attainable if Root maintains his fitness and form over the coming years.

In the Sydney Test, Root anchored England's innings with authority, stitching together a vital 169-run fourth-wicket partnership with Harry Brook. While Brook fell agonisingly short of a century, dismissed for 84 by Scott Boland, Root's composure and control ensured England showed resilience and class in the series finale. Even in defeat, Root's performances have been a shining light for England, reinforcing his legacy as one of the game's greats and keeping the cricketing world watching as he edges closer to history.

Skipper says strong World Cup showings vital for Zimbabwe's revival and global credibility

World Cups key for Zimbabwe to reclaim respect in global cricket: Sikandar Raza

CAPE TOWN

Zimbabwe captain Sikandar Raza believes World Cups offer his side the most important platform to regain lost respect and re-establish themselves on the world cricketing map, beginning with the upcoming ICC T20 World Cup in February.

Zimbabwe have been placed in Group B alongside former champions Australia and Sri Lanka, as well as Ireland and Oman. Raza said the global stage presents a rare opportunity for his team to make a strong statement through performances rather than expectations.

"The World Cup is really crucial in every cricketer's life. For Zimbabwe to gain more respect in world cricket, World Cups play a huge part," Raza said during an interaction facilitated by SA20 after Paarl Royals' win over MI Cape Town.

Raza underlined his readiness for the marquee event with a match-winning spell of 4/13, guiding the Royals to a comfortable seven-wicket victory. He stressed that while results are uncertain, the focus would be on playing disciplined and fearless cricket.

"If we play the right brand of cricket and do what the game asks of us, results will follow," he said. Zimbabwe will play their group matches in Sri Lanka, where spin-friendly conditions are expected. Raza expressed confidence in his team's bowling resources, particularly their ability to sustain long spells of spin if required.

The all-rounder also highlighted the importance of Zimbabwean players featuring in competitive leagues such as SA20 and the recently concluded ILT20. According to him, exposure to high-intensity cricket improves match fitness and sharpens skills ahead of major tournaments.

"The more Zimbabweans playing quality cricket, the better it is for the country and the World Cup," Raza said.

Despite the recent personal tragedy of losing his 13-year-old brother Muhammad Mahdi, Raza chose to honour his commitments in SA20, stating he would not have participated if he was not mentally and emotionally ready.

A sought-after T20 freelancer who has played for 37 teams worldwide, Raza said his aim was to quietly inspire future generations. "Hopefully, my performances can open doors for more Zimbabweans and inspire others back home," he added.

Liverpool denied at Fulham by Reed screamer, Manchester United held at Leeds

Late Fulham equaliser and Leeds stalemate dent top-four pushes for Liverpool, United

LONDON

Liverpool were left frustrated after conceding a dramatic late equaliser in a pulsating 2-2 draw at Fulham, while Manchester United dropped more points in the race for the top four with a 1-1 stalemate at Leeds United in the Premier League. At Craven Cottage, Liverpool extended their unbeaten league run to eight matches but failed to make it count. With their title defence effectively over, securing a Champions League spot remains the priority, and two dropped points did little to strengthen that pursuit.

Fulham struck first through Harry Wilson in the 17th minute before Florian Wirtz continued his recent revival, netting his second goal in three games to level the scores before the hour mark. The visitors looked set to snatch victory when Cody Gakpo scored deep into stoppage time, but Harrison Reed stunned Liverpool with a thunderous 30-metre strike in the 97th minute to earn Fulham a deserved share of the spoils.

"Not satisfied at all. We need points and we wanted three today," Wirtz said, hailing Reed's effort as "unbelievable".

Liverpool remain fourth on 34 points from 20 games, 14 adrift of leaders Arsenal and just three ahead of fifth-placed Manchester United.

United, meanwhile, once again failed to capitalise as they were held at Leeds in a traditionally fiery encounter. Ruben Amorim's side fell behind to a Brenden Aaronson goal before Matheus Cunha's equaliser ensured they salvaged a point. However, it marked another missed opportunity for a team that has drawn too many matches they were expected to win.

Amorim cut a frustrated figure after the match, insisting structural issues at the club needed addressing alongside on-field performances.

Elsewhere, Brentford's Igor Thiago rediscovered his scoring touch with a hat-trick in a 4-2 win at Everton, Tottenham were held 1-1 at home by Sunderland, and Newcastle United climbed into the top half with a 2-0 victory over Crystal Palace.

Premier League: Chelsea's Fernandez grabs late equaliser to force draw with Man City

MANCHESTER

Chelsea's Enzo Fernandez struck deep into injury time to snatch a dramatic 1-1 draw against Manchester City at the Etihad Stadium, dealing a blow to Pep Guardiola's side in the Premier League title race.

City looked set to collect all three points after Tijjani Reijnders fired them ahead late in the first half, capping sustained pressure from the hosts. But Chelsea, arriving in Manchester after a turbulent week that included the departure of manager Enzo Maresca on New Year's Day, showed grit and belief to earn a point at the death.

Fernandez scored in the 94th minute after Malo Gusto's cross deflected off Nathan Ake and fell invitingly at the far post. The Argentine midfielder mis-hit his first effort and saw his second saved by Gianluigi Donnarumma, but he reacted quickest to force the ball over the line with his third attempt, silencing the home crowd.

City, who dominated possession and chances, were left to rue a series of missed opportunities. Erling Haaland was particularly unlucky, hitting the inside of the post with one of his five shots, while Phil Foden and Bernardo Silva also went close. Guardiola cut a frustrated figure on the touchline as City failed to convert their superiority into a decisive second goal.

The draw leaves City second in the standings on 42 points, level with Aston Villa and six behind leaders Arsenal. Chelsea sit fifth on 31 points, keeping themselves in the hunt for a top-four finish despite recent upheaval.

Guardiola admitted wastefulness cost his side. "We missed chances in the second half. When you talk about stats, one is how effective you are in the final third," he said.

There were positives for City, with Ballon d'Or winner Rodri impressing on his first start in three months, though injuries to defenders Josko Gvardiol and Ruben Dias tempered the mood.

Chelsea interim manager Calum McFarlane praised his players' character. "Everyone thought we were coming here to lose, but the lads showed belief and fight. I'm really proud of them," he said, calling the performance "something you dream about."

PSG EDGE PARIS FC IN DERBY AS MARSEILLE STUMBLE AT HOME

PARIS

Defending champions Paris Saint-Germain kept pace at the top of Ligue 1 with a 2-1 victory over Paris FC in a historic Paris derby, as rivals Marseille slipped further behind after a home defeat to Nantes.

PSG's win ensured they remain just one point behind surprise leaders Lens, who continued their strong run earlier in the weekend. It was the first men's top-flight Paris derby since 1990 and was played at the Parc des Princes, located just metres away from Paris FC's home ground, Stade Jean Bouin. After squandering several promising chances with overly elaborate passing, PSG finally broke the deadlock just before halftime. Young forward Désiré Doué latched onto a well-weighted pass and calmly clipped the ball over goalkeeper Kevin Trapp from close range to give the hosts a deserved lead. Paris FC responded after the break when Willem Geubbels converted a penalty in the 51st minute, awarded after PSG defender Illia Zabarnyi was penalised. The visitors' joy was short-lived, however, as PSG restored their advantage just two minutes later. Ousmane Dembélé cut inside from the right and saw his shot deflect past Trapp, a former PSG goalkeeper, to settle the contest.

Elsewhere, Marseille's inconsistent season continued with a damaging 2-0 loss at home to Nantes, leaving them eight points adrift of third-placed Lens. The match unravelled quickly for Marseille, who had two players sent off in a performance that infuriated coach Roberto De Zerbi. Midfielder Arthur Vermeeren was shown a straight red card midway through the first half, before Bilal Nadir was dismissed after receiving a second yellow in the 56th minute.

Mounting tensions and inconsistent results prompt United to act after Leeds draw

Ruben Amorim sacked: Manchester United dismiss head coach after 14 months in charge

MANCHESTER

Manchester United have sacked head coach Ruben Amorim after just 14 months in charge, bringing an abrupt end to the Portuguese manager's tenure amid growing unrest at Old Trafford.

The decision was taken following a meeting on Monday morning between Amorim, chief executive Omar Berrada and director of football Jason Wilcox, during which the 40-year-old was informed he was being relieved of his duties. Amorim's final match in charge was Sunday's 1-1 Premier League draw away at Leeds United, a result that left United sixth in the table and still searching for consistency.

United confirmed the move in an official statement, saying the club's leadership had "reluctantly made the decision that it is the right time to make a change" in order to give the team "the best opportunity of the highest possible Premier League finish".

Amorim's dismissal follows weeks of reported tension behind the scenes, particularly with senior figures in the football hierarchy. Those strains were evident in his final press conference, where he stressed that he had joined Manchester United to be a "manager, not a coach", comments widely interpreted as a sign of internal discord. Appointed with high expectations, Amorim was tasked with reshaping United's identity and restoring them as title contenders. While there were flashes of progress, performances remained uneven, and a string of draws against lower-ranked opposition ultimately eroded confidence in his long-term vision.

Former United midfielder Darren Fletcher has been placed in interim charge and will lead the team for Wednesday night's Premier League fixture against Burnley. The club has not yet confirmed whether Fletcher will remain in the role beyond that match or if an external appointment is being considered.

United now face yet another period of transition as they attempt to steady the ship and salvage their season. With Champions League qualification still within reach, the pressure will be on the players and interim staff to respond quickly to the latest managerial upheaval. Amorim departs Old Trafford after 14 months, his spell marked by promise, friction and ultimately an inability to align results with expectations at one of football's most demanding clubs.

Rejuvenated Indian shuttlers seek strong Malaysia Open start

KUALA LUMPUR

After a testing 2025 marred by injuries and inconsistent results, Indian badminton players will look to turn the page and begin the new season on a positive note at the Malaysia Open Super 1000, starting here on Tuesday.

Led by seasoned campaigners Lakshya Sen and P.V. Sindhu, the Indian contingent will face a stern challenge at the season-opening tournament, which carries a prize purse of USD 1.45 million and features the world's best across categories. The event also serves as a crucial build-up to next week's India Open Super 750 in New Delhi.

Lakshya was India's standout performer last year, rediscovering form with a title at the Australian Open Super 500 after a lean patch following his fourth-place finish at the Paris Olympics. The 24-year-old will aim to carry that momentum when he opens against Singapore's Jia Heng Jason Teh.

Youngster Ayush Shetty, who announced his arrival by winning the US Open Super 300, will be keen to improve consistency as he takes on Paris Olympics bronze medallist Lee Zii Jia of Malaysia in a tough opening-round clash.

Sindhu, a two-time Olympic medallist and former world champion, will be eager to put fitness concerns behind her after missing competitions from October due to a foot injury. She begins her campaign against Chinese Taipei's Sung Shuo Yun. Unnati Hooda faces a stiff test against fourth seed Chen Yu Fei of China, while Malvika Bansod returns from a long knee-injury layoff to play former world champion Ratchanok Intanon.

In men's doubles, focus will be on world No. 3 Satwiksairaj Rankireddy and Chirag Shetty, India's most consistent pair in 2025.

HIL 2026: Putting behind 2025, SG Pipers set to chart fresh course

CHENNAI

The 2025 season of the men's Hockey India League proved a sobering experience for SG Pipers. Despite being guided by renowned Australian coach Graham Reid, the franchise finished at the bottom of the table, forcing a period of reflection and reassessment.

Heading into the 2026 edition, Pipers are eager to begin anew. The management has overhauled the leadership group, appointing former India goalkeeper and two-time Olympic bronze medallist P.R. Sreejesh as mentor, while Dutchman Tim Oudenaller takes over as head coach. The new leadership is expected to inject clarity, balance and renewed purpose into the side.

Though Oudenaller has not coached a senior national team, his credentials are impressive. He was part of the Netherlands' under-21 coaching setup at the recent FIH Junior Men's World Cup and enjoyed success with HC Kampong, guiding the club to the 2023–24 Hoofdklasse title and a Euro Hockey League final.

As Jarmanpreet Singh's team prepares for its opening match at the SDAT–Mayor Radhakrishnan Stadium on Monday, Oudenaller stressed the importance of cohesion. "Winning matters, but the connection between Indian and overseas players is equally important," he said.

Penalty corners were decisive last season, accounting for nearly 45 per cent of league goals. With renewed focus on set-pieces, defensive solidity, and depth from players like Varun Kumar, Rupinder Pal Singh and Gareth Furlong, Pipers hope to show marked improvement.

FRAN JONES stuns Emma Navarro in career-best ASB Classic win

AUCKLAND

Great Britain's Fran Jones produced the biggest win of her professional career, defeating world No. 15 Emma Navarro in a gripping first-round encounter at the ASB Classic to kick off her 2026 season in style.

The British No. 3 overcame the American second seed 7-5, 2-6, 6-4, marking her first-ever victory over a top-20 player and underlining her growing confidence on the WTA Tour. The result sends Jones into the second round in Auckland, where she will face Austrian qualifier Sinja Kraus.

Jones showed composure and resilience in a match interrupted by rain and momentum swings. She claimed the opening set after play resumed from a weather delay at 5-5, breaking Navarro's serve at a crucial moment to take the set 7-5. The American responded strongly in the second set, using her power and depth to level the contest.

In the decider, Jones struck early, breaking Navarro in the American's second service game to seize control. Despite Navarro winning more total points over the course of the match, Jones held her nerve, protecting her serve with authority and refusing to allow the higher-ranked player back into the contest. She sealed the win after two hours and 18 minutes, drawing an emotional reaction on court.

"I'm absolutely knackered," Jones said in her on-court interview. "For the first match of the year, I didn't make it easy. But I'm really grateful to my team. Preparing for a new season is always complicated, and having the right attitude in the first match is the most important thing." Jones also acknowledged that Navarro was capable of an even higher level, but stressed the importance of starting the year positively. "It's about finding your feet early in the season, and thankfully I did that today," she added.

The victory is a significant milestone for the 24-year-old, who has steadily climbed the rankings despite physical challenges earlier in her career. Beating a top-15 opponent on a hard court provides a major confidence boost as she looks to build momentum ahead of the Australian Open swing. Jones will now aim to back up the landmark win when she meets Kraus, with a place in the quarterfinals at stake.
